Norway, FAO data vessel in month-long fisheries update

By Getrude Mbago

TANZANIA is set to update data on the state of fisheries resources along the coastline, in the wake of a month-long research voyage.

Nyabenyi Tipo (pictures), the UN Food and Agricultural Organisation (FAO) country representative, said at the port of Dar es Salaam yesterday that the Norway-funded ecosystem approach to fisheries Nansen programme executed by the UN agency will update the data as the vessel traverses deep waters near Mtwara, Tanga, Dar es Salaam as well as Unguja and Pemba islands.

The research exercise is timely as the data will help to calibrate industrial fishing projections as part of the blue economy drive, she stated, noting that the vessel started plying the waters on June 28 and finishes up on July 28.

It is focused on collecting samples for determination of the diversity of fish and their distribution, the physical environment and levels of pollution in the coastal waters, she stated.

They will collaborate with the Norwegian coordinator, the Institute of Marine Research (IMR) and FAO scientists working across disciplines to address pressing issues such as overfishing, habitat destruction, pollution and climate change, she stated.

The Dr Fridtjof Nansen ship visited Tanzania for the first time for a thorough study 40 years ago, then in 2018 and is returning now. All these trips have helped the government to update scientific data on the state of the seashore and its resources, she explained.

In the past 45 years, the Nansen programme has collaborated with 58 countries across Africa, Asia and South

George Simbachawene, the Public Service Management and Good Governance state minister in the President's Office, had earlier said that discussions during the conference touched on confiscating all assets and properties acquired through dubious means.

Corruption's impact in Africa's education sector was also raised, he stated, exclaiming that this "needs immediate intervention to save the future of the continent." Security organs especially the police and courts along with politicians were steeped in graft, the minister insisted.

Dr Ayoub Rioba, the Tanzania Broadcasting Corporation (TBC) director general, said in an interview that it was difficult for most media outlets to investigate cases of graft.

Many outlets are dependent on public entities, private companies and other institutions who place paid advertisements in those outlets, he said.

Journalists face hurdles in effectively pursuing stories that light up corruption cases, while Dr Edward Hoseah, the former head of the Tanzania anti-corruption agency, said the fight against corruption in Africa may be slowed down by ineffective anti-graft

AIR Tanzania Company Limited managing director Ladislaus Matindi, has been named Africa's Most Respected CEOs by the Business Executive institution of Mauritius for leading efficient operations of the airline company.

Speaking to this paper at the ongoing 47th Dar es Salaam International Trade Fair (DITF) in Dar es Salaam, the head of the agency's relations unit, Sarah Reuben, said that the award was presented to him last week in Mauritius.

She said one of the criteria for getting the award was his his history of excellence in the aviation sector.

Sarah said that during a period of 2016 to 2023, there have been many improvements to revitalize ATCL where Matindi has been a leader in the transformation process.

recognition of contribution, the way he achieved reforms within the organization in a short period of time in comparison with the performance of other airlines, they decided to name him the Best Chief Executive Officer in Africa for the year 2023," she said.

He said that among the things that were looked at were the operations of the company, the increase in flights, the increase manages flights and the way he managed to reduce the costs of the company.

She said that other criteria that were checked was the way he managed to add executives and experts of various types within the organization such as pilots and flight engineers.

"There are many criteria that are looked at, for example his ability to supervise pilots, manage these planes and the ability to do internal maintenance have contributed to get this award which is given every year and his ability to contribute to various regional issues," she said.

Sarah added that another attribute that enabled him to get the award was his contribution performance in the company and in flight destination, the way he to the African Airlines Association (AFRAA) where Matindi is one of the members.

> Sarah said that in recent years ATCL had won the award of best choice consumer airline in domestic and for this region of East Africa.

She said in 2022 African Airlines Association (AFRAA) became the most improved airline in Africa while in 2021 Skytrax World Airline Awards they emerged the Regional Airline of the Year in Africa.

She said in the 2021 Trip Advisor Travelers' Choice Awards the company also emerged in the Top 10 Airlines in Africa and in the 2020 AFRAA Air Transport Excellence Awards they emerged the best regional airline in Africa.

June inflation rate declines to 3.6 pct

By Polycarp Machira, Dodoma

THE annual headline inflation rate for the month of June, 2023 has decreased to 3.6 percent from 4.0 percent recorded for the month of May, 2023, the National Bureau of Statistics (NBS) has shown.

The decrease of the headline inflation explains that, the speed of price change for commodities for the year ended June, 2023 has decreased compared to the speed that was recorded for the year ended May, 2023.

A statement issued by NBS also states that the overall index went up from 108.93 recorded in June, 2022 to 112.81 in June, 2023.

The national consumer price the dwelling (0.3). index between May 2023 and June 2023 has increased by 0.1 percent. The increase of the overall index is attributed to price increase for non-food items.

Some non-food items that contributed to an increase of the index include alcoholic beverages and tobacco by 0.2 percent, clothing materials (0.3), garments for men (0.6) and garments for women (0.3).

garments for Others are children (0.5), footwear for men (0.4), footwear for women (0.2), footwear for children (0.4), actual rentals paid by tenants main dwelling (0.2), products and for June, 2023 also decreased to 1.8

The rest are firewood (5.1), wood charcoal (1.1), corrective eyeglasses (1.8), petrol(0.2) mobile telephone handsets(0.4),food provided by full-service restaurants (0.5), accommodation services in hotels, lodges and guest house (0.4) and goods and services for personal care(0.5).

Food and non-alcoholic beverages inflation rate for June, 2023 has decreased to 7.8 percent from 8.5 percent that was recorded in May, 2023.

On the other hand, annual inflation rate for all items without food and non-alcoholic beverages materials for the maintenance of percent from 2.1 percent that was recorded in May, 2023

The NCPI has shown a relatively stable price movement from June, 2022 to June, 2023 ranging between 108.93 and 112.81 respectively.

"In addition, annual headline inflation rates over the same period have shown a stable trend that ranges between 3.6 percent and 4.9 percent." reads the statement.

In comparison with other East African countries, both Uganda and Kenya also experienced decreased inflation rates with Kenya recording 7.9 percent in June 2023, down from 8.0 percent in May, 2023. Uganda recorded 4.9 percent in June, 2023 compared to 6.2 percent in May, 2023.

quality of life and sustainable development, she stated, urging state parties to the AfCFTA accord, working with the private sector, to carry out mass awareness campaigns on the trade opportunities the pact brings up.

To ensure meaningful trade integration at the continental level Africa needs to expedite and finalise negotiations on the AfCFTA rules of origin, she said, pointing at textiles and motor vehicles as the key problem areas.

This is a key step for harmony of rules and determining the nationality of products traded across the continent, she stated, underlining that this should go along with formulating a common position on the status of the goods produced under EPZ/SEZ schemes.

Rebecca Miano, the East African Community and Arid and Semiarid Lands cabinet secretary in Kenya, underscored the need for a vibrant private sector in promoting economic growth at the national, regional and continental level.

The private sector accounts for 80 per cent of Africa's total production, two-thirds of investment and three-quarters of credit in addition to employing 90 per cent of the continent's working-age population, she stated.

A robust private sector was indispensable to the realisation added.

of sustainable development and economic transformation, she said, insisting that the success of Africa's economic integration is premised on the role of the private sector.

It is key to achieving growth objectives of Africa's economies, and by extension, creating greater wealth and expanding employment opportunities, the minister noted.

African regional economic communities like the EAC need to upscale investment in agricultural and extractive industries for value addition to expand the potential of crop sector and mineral industry value chains, she affirmed.

Annette Ssemuwemba, the EAC Customs, Trade and Monetary Affairs deputy secretary general urged the forum to come up with practical and timely solutions to the current economic crisis facing the African continent caused in part by the Covid-19 pandemic.

EAC partner states' economies were on a growth trajectory, though slowly, with post-COVID-19 economic recovery since 2021 indicating the region's GDP growth as standing at upwards of 4.0 per cent in 2022.

It is expected to increase to 4.7 per cent by the end of 2023 as countries reopen their economies further, with all EAC partner states having experienced positive growth ranging from 1.5 per cent to 11 per cent in the past two years, she

America, assisting them in fisheries research and management, she stated.

She noted: "The future of our ocean depends on all of us, and the EAF-Nansen Programme is committed to its role as a catalyst for achieving sustainably managed oceans in the face of changing tides, FAO supports various countries with the implementation of an ecosystem approach to fisheries and a better understanding of the impacts of climate change and other external factors such as pollution on aquatic ecosystems," she asserted.

Suleiman Masoud Makame, the Blue Economy and Fisheries minister for Zanzibar said that the future of Tanzania and Africa in general depends on healthy oceans, thus studies on marine resources are critical towards achieving set goals.

Elisabeth Jacobsen, Norwegian resident ambassador, emphasized cooperation enhancing the understanding of the ocean and its resources.

"By working together, we can build productive and thriving marine and maritime industries, which we know contribute to economic growth and research and management.

development," she stated.

Dr Ismael Kimirei, the TAFIRI director general said that the Nansen programme has been instrumental in building the capacity of local scientists and researchers.

"Through training programs, workshops and joint research projects, we have been able to develop a new generation of experts equipped with the skills and knowledge needed to address the complex challenges facing our part of the sea," he said.

Dr Zakaria Khamis, his ZAFIRI counterpart, underlined that the challenges confronted are enormous - overfishing, climate change, pollution, and habitat destruction, posing significant threats to the integrity of marine ecosystems. These challenges can only be effectively addressed through comprehensive collaborative efforts within the country and through international cooperation.

The EAF-Nansen Programme is a longstanding partnership between the FAO and Norway, dating back to the mid-70s, having collaborated with 58 countries across Africa, Asia, and South America in fisheries

Association donates medical equipment for treatment of heart's electrical system

By Correspondent Joseph Mwendapole

THE Association of African Doctors in the United States has donated medical equipment worth 1bn/- for the special five-day camp for treatment of the heart's electrical system.

The camp that started yesterday at Jakaya Kikwete Cardiac Institute (JKCI), is aimed at sharing experiences between JKCI health experts and their colleagues from the US in assisting patients with medical equipment and providing medical services for the electrical system of the heart.

Speaking during the camp, Deputy Minister of Health Dr Godwin Mollel commended the US based experts for the support saying the heart electrical system was among the main challenges facing the majority in the country.

"Our president has invested in a modern electrocardiogram treatment plant, in terms of treatment we have tried to find experts capable of providing the best services in line with the existing technology, we have to cooperate with you because you have been providing this treatment for a long time," said Dr Mollel.

Dr Mollel said apart from sharing experiences, the doctors know that there are Tanzanians with heart problems but they are not able to afford the medical expenses, so they bring medical equipment to support them.

JKCI executive director Dr Peter Kisenge said the visiting experts have brought medical equipment to the camp, where patients with serious problems will be treated, and hence sharing experiences with local nurses and experts in operating the Cathlab machine.

David Singh, an electrocardiologist from the African Doctors Association, said that in the camp they are collaborating with JKCI doctors to learn new methods of treating the heart's electrical system in order to keep up with the development of medical technology.

"We have arrived at this Institute because we have information about the best services provided to patients who are treated here, so we saw that it is the right place where we can collaborate and improve services further," said Dr

MUHAS rated among top 3 varsities in sub-Saharan Africa in recent times

By Henry Mwangonde

THE Muhimbili University of Health and Allied Sciences (MUHAS) has been rated among the top three Universities in Sub-Saharan Africa in the recent Times Higher Education (THE) World University rankings.

MUHAS acting Vice Chancellor Prof Apolinary Kamuhabwa said at a press conference yesterday that the just released 2023 Sub-Saharan Africa University Rankings has placed MUHAS third among 121 institutions after two South African Universities, the University of Witwatersrand and University of Johannesburg, which are ranked first and second, respectively.

"The ranking covers elements of teaching, impact and research through exploring five key areas which are resources and finances, access and fairness, teaching skills, student engagement, and Africa impact," he said.

He added that the Sub-Saharan Africa university rankings were developed specifically to address the challenges faced by higher education institutions in Sub-Saharan Africa.

Prof Kamuhabwa achievement is a result of a number of strategic plans and policies that were put in place and implemented over the years to improve teaching, learning, and research at the University. These strategies have built a great capacity which has led to all the achievements for

Earlier this year, MUHAS was ranked among the ten best universities in Africa by THE World University Rankings 2023, and was placed at number five among the universities in Africa, and in the 401-500 category globally.

The accuracy of the data submitted to THE for ranking is of primary importance. The data submitted should be verifiable and accurate and submitted according to the guidelines and format required by THE.

He said the submitted data includes the academic profile of the University in terms of student population and student to faculty ratio, the number of academic programmes, the number of students in different types of academic programmes, and the volume of research. "MUHAS has 103 academic programmes and most of these, 84 are postgraduate programmes. Furthermore, most of the regional referral hospitals and specialty hospitals across the country are run by the health professionals trained at MUHAS," he said.

This initiative has further provided platforms for disseminating evidence for sound policy changes and therefore impact to the wider population.

This research output has been a result of multiple efforts by MUHAS scientists, faculty, students and our collaborating partners.

Over the 60 years of its existence, MUHAS has continued to grow and expand the teaching and research environment while taking a leading role in providing consultancy services and advice to government, Non-Governmental Organizations as well as for the international community.

EAC challenged to get solutions to non-tariff barriers affecting women entrepreneurs in bloc

By Felister Peter

EAST African Community (EAC) partner states have been challenged to find solutions to non-tariff barriers (NTBs) affecting women entrepreneurs in the bloc.

Some of the NTBs that are said to affect business by women cross border traders in the region are excessive charges, corruption, bribes, impounding of goods and difficulties in obtaining passport and Visa.

Addressing delegates at the Academy for Women Entrepreneurs (AWE) Alumni East Africa summit in Dar es Salaam yesterday, Fred Mwesigye, the High Commissioner of Uganda to Tanzania underscored the need to ensure an enabling business environment for w as 70 percent of cross border traders in the region are women. He said women entrepreneurs account for 80 percent of informal cross border trade.

AWE is a global initiative of the United States government seeking to promote women's economic empowerment with the goal of helping 50 million women worldwide. In Tanzania, AWE has empowered over 150 women entrepreneurs in partnership with SELFINA by providing them with skills to achieve their economic potential.

Mwesigye stated that apart from NTBs, the other challenges women entrepreneurs in EAC face include poor technical technology and managerial practices which affects their competitiveness at local and international markets. He highlighted that most women entrepreneurs are also not aware of the EAC trade rules and regulations.

"We are grateful to the US government as it works to assist women entrepreneurs to add value to their products. Efforts to provide entrepreneurs with the seed funding will help resolve challenges of high transaction costs as well as inadequate funding among women entrepreneurs," he remarked.

He said according to the EAC strategy for promoting women in business and women social economic empowerment, women own between 35 and 55 percent of business in the region. He however said most of the businesses are in the informal sector.

Representing the High Commissioner of Kenya, Robson Wanjara, In charge of Economic and Commercial issues at the Embassy, said women entrepreneurs in the EAC play a significant role in creating jobs and reducing poverty.

"It is important to promote women entrepreneurs and mainstream gender equality in our development process in the bloc. Gender equality and women empowerment is critical in realizing our development goals," he said, commending the US government's initiative as it is in line with the EAC's efforts to attain the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) on gender equality and women empowerment.

Dr Victoria Kisyombe, AWE Tanzania Implementer said since its establishment in 2019, the program has benefitted more than 300 women entrepreneurs in the country.

Dr Kisyombe added that the US government has so far provided 540m/- as seed money to 22 women entrepreneurs in Tanzania. She said the US Embassy in Dar es Salaam is also supporting 50 women entrepreneurs participating at the ongoing Dar es Salaam International Trade Fair

In Tanzania, she said, AWE has expanded to reach women in Kagera, Kigoma, Mbeya, Mwanza, Dodoma, Iringa, Zanzibar and Bagamoyo District in Coast Region. She said two more regions--Mara and Pemba will be included in the program this year.

US Ambassador to Tanzania, Michael Battle said a total of 25,000 women entrepreneurs around the globe have been empowered through AWE since 2019. He said AWE alumni have demonstrated the importance of investing in women led businesses to achieve sustainable growth across the EAC.

Rashid Kilambo, Principal Trade Officer, Ministry of Industry and Trade said the program is crucial as it has benefitted many women entrepreneurs.

Kilambo who represented the Minister for Industry and Trade added: "Education is a key to uplifting women and providing them equal access and opportunities on the playing field."

Tanga port registers 8.2pc cargo increase

By Guardian Correspondent, Tanga

STATISTICS show an increase at Tanga port in the period of six months for 2023.

Eng Aron Kisaka, Director of Transport Services in the Ministry of Works and Transport revealed this here yesterday at the meeting of the committee for the improvement of Tanga Port.

Kisaka said the government refurbishments, hence Tanzania Ports Authority (TPA) is supposed to make sure its markets division cargo volumes at the Port. is well mobilised.

"After investment in the of 8.2 per cent of cargo handled infrastructures at the Port, especially on the berth and handling equipment, we should expect more cargo, hence it is the responsibility of TPA Markets Department to make sure the cargo is well handled so that customers do not run away from Tanga port," added.

He also called on TPA to make anticipates more increase after sure it increases the speed of discussion with other shipping companies in order to increase

For his part, Acting Tanga port manager, Peter Milanzi said in 2023/24 the government, through TPA, is mobilised to add an additional berth for both cargo and passengers at the Port.

Lilian Mbwambo, a ports stakeholder from Tanga Modern Shipping Agency said government's procedure having joint meetings with all stakeholders will simplify in solving existing challenges in time for smooth running of port operations.

> "We understand that there are still some challenges regarding the management of constituency funds including tax deductions, but the government will make sure the issue is worked on to make sure no tax is charged on constituency funds," said deputy Minister Khamis.

For his part, the Chairman of Union Government MPs from Zanzibar, Haji Amour Haji thanked the VPO for organising the training seminar, saying it is an important step from both governments that aim to deal with various challenges facing the management of constituency development funds.

Dr Islam Seif Salum, Permanent Secretary in the Zanzibar Second Vice President's Office said both Union and Zanzibar governments continue addressing various challenges facing the constituencies' development funds management, including the issue of timely access to the fund.

'Use freedom of expression without undermining others'

By Correspondent Sabato Kasika

THE Legal and Human Rights Centre (LHRC) has reminded the public on the need to use their freedom of expression without undermining other people on the basis of gender, religion, tribe, status, colour and disabilities.

LHRC director Dr Anna Henga made the remarks in a statement to the media on the call to maintain the freedom of expression in Dar es Salaam yesterday.

She said LHRC expresses its dissatisfaction on signs for the plummeting freedom of expression in which some Tanzanians with Tanzania and other laws without different views complained that their lives were under threat.

Dr Henga said those claiming to be threatened by some unknown people owing to their views being different with those of others in regard to the debates regarding the national interests.

She explained in the LHRC statement that for nearly one week now, there have been debates among Tanzanians complaining about being threatened by some unknown people.

"We therefore call upon the community to utilise the freedom among the community that of expression provided by recently there have been situations Article 18 of the Constitution of undermining other people in regard to their colour, gender, tribe, status or disabilities," she said in the statement.

She added that the freedom of expression is also protected by Section 19 of the 1966 Universal Human and Political Rights, section 9 of the 1989 African Human Rights protocol both of which Tanzania is signatories.

She said it is important that these freedoms should be adhered to without undermining other people in the criteria of their colour, gender, tribe, status or disabilities," she said in the

Samia meets AfDB to advance post-Dakar 2 Africa food summit farming transformation

By Guardian Reporter, Dodoma

PRESIDENT Samia Suluhu Hassan held talks with an African (AfDB) Development Bank delegation led by vice president Beth Dunford to boost the East African country's agricultural production and food security.

The meetings, held on 27 June, covered various development issues, including the Bank's recognition of Tanzania's progress in developing its agriculture sector following January's Dakar 2 Africa Food Summit.

President Samia was one of many Heads of State and Government who chaired or commissioned Presidential boardrooms during the summit to discuss country food and agriculture delivery compacts centered on African solutions to boost the continent's food systems.

Since the Summit, Tanzania has tripled its budget for agriculture and was the first country to set up a Presidential Delivery Council to oversee the implementation of its Compact. The Council will approve and advise on establishing an enabling environment to deliver on work plans across commodity value chains.

She thanked the Bank for organizing the Dakar 2 summit, calling the institution a "dependable partner" for assisting Tanzania with its development goals in agriculture and other sectors.

Tanzania's Food and Agriculture Delivery Compact, like other Dakar 2 country compacts, is rooted in agriculture and cuts across many sectors. These include improving national, regional and international trade; affirming the "bankability" of women who work or own most of Africa's small and medium agriculture enterprises who face barriers to financing; and, creating decent jobs for youth across Africa's agricultural value chain.

President Samia and the Bank agreed to increase collaboration with other development partners to ensure a holistic and integrated approach to the full realization of the Tanzania Food and Agriculture Delivery Compact.

Dunford, vice president for Agriculture, Human and Social Development, commended President Samia's "dynamic leadership" and commitment Tanzania's agricultural transformation.

She said her advancing outcomes of the Dakar 2 Africa Food Summit are delivering impactful results for the people of Tanzania.

Tanzania's Ministers Agriculture, Finance, and Livestock and Fisheries participated in the discussions, which also touched on the Bank's financing of a national initiative to attract more youth into agribusiness. Known as Tanzania's

Building A Better Tomorrow: Youth Initiative for Agribusiness, it focuses on empowering youth in the agriculture sector, providing them with skills, including technologies for sustainable and improved livelihoods.

"The Bank will provide young with climate-smart technology packages for improved production of wheat, horticulture and for oilseed. We will also provide them with access to finance and markets," said the Bank's Director for Agriculture and Agro-Industry, Martin Fregene.

The Bank plans to develop a Special Agro-Industrial Processing Zone in Tanzania's southern highlands next year. Special Agro-Industrial Processing Zones, a Bank flagship initiative, creates economic zones in rural areas to provide onestop agricultural infrastructure

- by concentrating commercial farm production systems, utilities, transport, processing and other services. The zones also build capacity to scale up marketable food products for local and global markets.

Samia has genuine intention to assist poor households: minister

By Guardian Correspondent, Kibaha

PRESIDENT Samia Suluhu Hassan has implemented her intention to reach out to Tanzanians in need through the Tanzania Social Action Fund (TASAF) project.

Ridhiwani Kikwete, Deputy Minister in the President's Office (Public Service Management and Good Governance) made the remarks here yesterday when addressing Kingowe Ward residents who are TASAF beneficiaries during his official visit that aimed to inspect the implementation of TASAF projects in Kibaha Town Council, Coast Region.

Kikwete said within two years of President Samia's leadership, more than 51bn/- has been spent to help poor households through TASAF.

He called upon Tanzanians to continue working hard in support of President Samia who has shown her genuine intention to raise the economic wellbeing of Tanzanians through TASAF.

For his part, Kibaha District Commissioner, Nickson Simon commended TASAF beneficiaries who conduct business through various loans obtained from TASAF.

Mariam Pazi, a TASAF beneficiary, on behalf of fellow beneficiaries thanked President Samia for enabling them to get various loans that have assisted them engage in businesses through various groups they formed.

Kikwete in his one-week visit in the Coast Region aimed to mobilise for accountability among public servants, solve the challenges they face and to inspect the implementation of TASAF projects.

'Construction sector leads in commercial disputes'

By Guardian Reporter

TANZANIA Institute of Arbitration (TIArb) has said that in the past six months alone it has received a total of 42 new cases, most of which are disputes in the construction sector followed by the communications

Addressing the media in Dar es Salaam on Monday, the institute's secretary, Usaje Mwambene, said that other cases involve disputes between businesses, businesses against the government, and private individuals.

He was speaking during the launch of activities to mark the 26th anniversary of the institute he said. which will be marked by a myriad of weeklong activities which will climax on July 14 with the holding of the 6th Annual Arbitration Conference.

"The construction sector has become a beacon for having many disputes and the communication sector comes next, some are normal business relations and some are between the government and individuals," he said.

TIArb also assured that they have resolved many commercial disputes in the country most of which resulted in a win-win situation for the disputing parties, but they would divulge further details for ethical reasons.

For his part, TIArb Vice President, Aderickson Njunwa said that among the activities this year will be to sensitize the public on issues related to arbitration and the theme for this year is "Arbitration in the 4th Industrial Revolution."

"There is a revolution in the technology used in doing business right now and it is crucial for people to understand alternative ways to resolve and settle their disputes before they are brought to court,"

Njunwa said their main activity is to coordinate and resolve commercial disputes as an alternative to the court system.

"Tanzania is currently open to investment and investors and the availability of alternative channels to resolve disputes serves as an assurance to prospective investors," he said.

Another activity carried out by the institution is to develop the skills and build the capacity of alternative arbitrators as it is a profession that TIArb.

requires expertise.

The conference was also graced by Judge Zainabu Mango from the Arbitration Center of the High Court of Tanzania who commended the institution for helping the courts in resolving disputes.

"The institute is an important stakeholder in matters arbitration, the court has the primary responsibility to ensure that justice is served in Tanzania and we cannot reach that goal alone, there are many disputes," she

He said in the past it was common for people to go to arbitration; they must have a written clause in their contracts before coming to court to be heard. "In recognition of the ongoing changes in the world, our laws on the conduct of civil proceedings have been amended in 2021 to allow the settlement of disputes in court even if they are brought to court by default," he said.

She also said that by using the services of the institute, people will save time and resources compared to going to court and thus encouraged the public to make the most of the services provided by

Dar security firm maintains standards ISO certification

SGA Security has maintained its ISO 18788 - security operations management system. The company first acquired this certification in 2020, being the first company in the country to be locally certified key standards in security operations.

Speaking during the ceremony to receive the ISO 18788 certificate, SGA managing director, Eric Sambu, reiterated the company's commitment to compliance with all laws and regulations in the country. "We believe that compliance is our license to operate, and we actively pursue top standards in every field to be able to give our customers value for money," Sambu said.

He said ISO 18788 is a much sought after certification by security operators as it connotes top standards in operations by the certified company. It demonstrates upholding of human rights in performance of duties and most importantly, quality of security services being provided.

SGA, he said, underwent a recertification audit conducted by Intertek Certification Limited of the UK, which is accredited by UK Accreditation Services (UKAS). The certification is applicable to the company's services including guarding, Electronic Security Solutions, alarm and response, Courier services and tracking solutions.

He added that SGA is a member of International Code of Conduct in provision of security services for Private Security Companies Association (ICoCA) that sets and maintains code of conduct for its members and reiterates human rights and full compliance with laws. We are proud that we continue to set a good example in the private security sector, living according to the wishes of the founding fathers of the company - the former IGP, the late Philemon Mgaya and his partner, Edmond van Tongeren.

SGA member of the Board of Directors, Oscar Mgaya, also took the opportunity to thank the management for being keen on the process that led to sustaining quality and complying with the law. He singled out the close partnership with stakeholders, especially the Tanzania Police Force.

"The founders, whom we are celebrating their lives with this week, intended that they forge mutually beneficial relations with Certifications - 9001, 14001 and all stakeholders and that is why the 45001.

Cash-In-Transit, government and employee unions are always present during SGA functions," Mgaya said.

> He stressed that the company has grown from strength to strength in the country, while ensuring full compliance with the statutory requirements.

> "People remain at the centre of SGA operations, and we foster a conducive working environment for many to have a successful career in the company, as demonstrated by the huge number of officers with long service," he concluded.

> Kinondoni Regional Police Commander, ACP Mtatiro Kitinkwi commended SGA for being a great example in the private security industry.

SGA Security is one of the oldest private security companies in the country, having started its operations in 1984. It now employs about 5,000 Tanzanians in its various service lines and branches across the country. It provides services across all sectors in the country. It has three other ISO

Education and training systems must respond to needs of youth

S the world undergoes unemployed youths was estimated technological, economic and societal Ltransformations, young people will need the right skills to successfully navigate these challenges and achieve their full potential. Recent estimates suggest that 600 million jobs would have to be created over the next 15 years to meet youth employment needs. People need a broad range of skills to contribute to the modern economy.

In December 2014, the United Nations adopted a resolution declaring 15th July as World Youth Skills Day. The goal is to achieve better socio-economic conditions for today's youth as a means of addressing the challenges unemployment and under employment. The theme for 2023 World Youth Skills Day is "Skilling teachers, trainers and youth for a transformative future".

The Day is also meant celebrate the strategic importance of equipping young people with skills for employment, decent work and entrepreneurship.

It highlights the essential role that teachers, trainers and other educators play in providing skills for youth to transition to the labour market and to actively engage in their communities and societies

Hard skills, also called technical skills, are any skills relating to a specific task or situation. It involves both understanding and proficiency in such specific activity that involves methods, processes, procedures, or techniques. These skills are easily quantifiable unlike soft skills, which are related to one's personality. An additional 8.4 million jobs for young people could be created by 2030 through the implementation of green and blue policy measures. Technological advancements and shifting labour market dynamics increasingly call for agile and adaptable skill sets. It is crucial that we empower young people to navigate these changes effectively. Technical and vocational education and training (TVET) is well placed to meet these demands by reducing access barriers to the world of work, ensuring that skills gained are relevant, recognized and certified, promoting green skills and practices, and offering skills development opportunities for youth who are not in education, employment and training.

One such observation was that since 2017 the number of adults excluded financially has fallen to 6.4m in 2023 from 7.8m at that time. A policy maker noted that as there are more adults now than in the earlier survey, it means the reduction in real terms was more intense.

Some experts looking at the survey results expressed the view that financial illiteracy brings up dormant cash, which is particularly true of the rural areas. Still this observation could be mitigated by observing other aspects, for instance formal financial inclusion jumping from 65 percent to 76 percent, with also a significant reduction in financial exclusion across gender. Cash dormancy is thus a matter of shortfalls in using potential after formal inclusion by real needs.

Looking at another parameter may bring out this impression more cohesively, in the finding that insurance penetration shrunk from 15 percent to 10 percent during situation.

In that case earlier expectations in the financial sector development master plan, projecting 50 percent of the adult population being included in the use of insurance products by 2030 took a hit. The issue is how the damage can be rectified, and the idea that financial literacy is the key issue is unhelpful, as it negates real needs, of growth based on formal sector activities. Even business that is registered for taxes, like operating frames, often remains marginal in

Discussants of the survey report noted that challenges in financial inclusion have to do with the way people earn and the irregularity of dominant income sources like crop harvests or livestock sales. It is such income that may often go without being banked as those earning it don't have needs in banks all the time, or having to withdraw cash from automatic dispensers. Clearly communal activities don't sufficiently interact with financial services, but portions of land are continually being bought or abandoned after compensation to start projects. Formal activities are on the rise. That is why the large oil and gas projects ought to be protected against protests in Europe and elsewhere since we need to pay traditional users of land to abandon it and shift to trading in a win-win

By Cyrus Ademola

OR the past few weeks, I have restrained myself from commenting on the controversial issue of subsidy removal. I've heard many pundits, commentators and columnists utter their criticism against what was once the consensual position of the political and economic elites: subsidy removal.

Up until May 29 when the president-elect declared in his inaugural speech that "subsidy is gone", the standard position is that subsidy is unsustainable and its cessation imminent. One then wonders, what exactly changed between then and May 29?

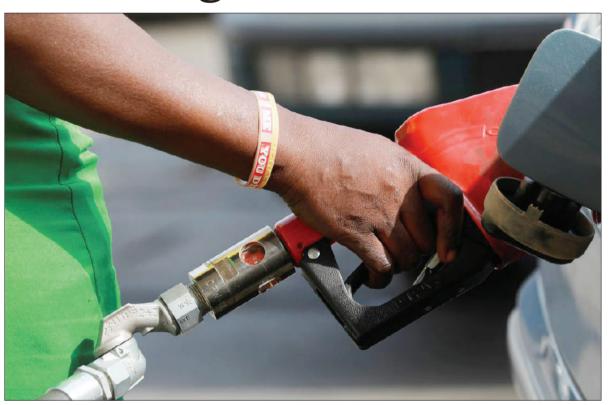

The unadulterated truth is that Nigerian elites are mired in the cultural trait of critique. It's adulatory and progressive to critique whatever it is the government does. This critical mindset confers the elites a celebrity position that they identify with the masses and ordinary, struggling Nigerians. It's a typical virtuesignalling approach that has its root in cultural Marxism, whereby every position held by the establishment is brought to questioning and ridicule -- regardless of the singsong praises such position enjoys before being adopted by the power-that-

It's no secret that the three leading presidential candidates -- Atiku, Obi and Tinubu -- held similar position that subsidy has to go, and it has to go "immediately". Now, rather than lauding the courage of the president for the political determination to uphold his campaign promises, social commentators (and even economists) are now claiming that such position is antithetical to the general view. This is hypocrisy. Added to that is the irony that subsidy removal was once a populist policy that the leading presidential candidates could push as their political talking points without the fear of losing potential votes.

I don't mind the criticism that the government should have rolled out palliatives and social welfare programmes before putting an end to the era of subsidy. I can understand the feeling of those who claim that the aftermath of the policy is biting hard on the masses, and there's a need to cushion the effect through government intervention.

This is a reasonable position to hold. However, no one believes that the removal of subsidy won't have a short-term adverse effect on the prices of goods and services. But the intelligent position is that on net balance those short-term discomforts will in turn unleash the latent potential of the oil sector and create room for competition, all the while ridding it of its inherent corruption and the malpractices embedded in subsidy.

We've seen in recent days how prices of premium motor spirit, PMS, have increased in neighbouring countries such as Benin, Mali, Togo, Ivory Coast and Ghana. This is owing to the fact that these countries benefit massively from our subsidy programme through the intermediary of black marketers. Put differently, our oil products are subsidise not only for Nigerians, but for other African

As a result, Nigerians are left high and dry, victims of record-high inflation, insurmountable public debt and unemployment, while other nations enjoy effortlessly cheap PMS to boost their own economy. This is how inherently corrupt and lopsided the subsidy era was. For the elites who shout the loudest against corruption and corrupt systems in governance, shouldn't this be a big win for them? Not at all. To laud such policy will be giving up their psuedo-morality that they are against the tide.

I know some people might accuse me for being partisan or pushing a narrative to ally with the ruling government. Granted that such possibility is inevitable, I must however point out for clarity sake that I've never at any point supported the ruling party pre or post-election. I never voted for Tinubu. Hence, the speculation that I'm only reiterating my party line is not only false, but also disingenuous.

One doesn't have to support the ruling party to appreciate a policy that works. That is the crux of this article -- that while criticism is a welcome development in any democratic system, it also has to be constructive, objective and nonpartisan. If all the opposition does is criticise without offering a more palpable solution, then we're not after nation building.

No matter how one twists and turns it, subsidy removal is a good thing for the Nigerian economy; it's particularly a good thing for the oil industry that has been mired in corruption, opacity, unaccountability and wastage for several decades. For the oil industry to be rejigged to become a wealth creating industry it once was, subsidy has to go. There's a saying that one must crack a few eggs before one makes an omelette. I think the newly elected president is doing exactly that. The cracking is never comfortable, but who doesn't like an omelette for breakfast?

We will fault the government when the time comes, but to speak against a good policy simply because one is trying to be politically correct or play opposition is simply out of principle. While we are at it, another brave move from the president is the unification of the naira in the foreign exchange market.

Here's another big blow dealt against corruption in the monetary and fiscal sector. With multiple exchange rates out of the window, those who maliciously benefit from arbitrage and rent-seeking can kiss their fraudulent enterprise goodbye.

The elites must realise that

Nigeria is bigger than their obsessive attempt to score cheap political points at the detriment of nation building. The position that the only acceptable convention is to be unconventional doesn't do anyone good, except the elites themselves. The arrogance of always wanting to be right borders on narcissism as well as intellectual dishonesty.

After eight years of Buhari's abysmal leadership, it is a nobrainer that whoever is at the helm of affairs of the Nigeria state has some tough decisions to make. If Tinubu is rising to the occasion to make these tough decisions, the least we can do for our nation is to offer constructive criticism, not blatant rebuke that he's working against the masses.

The strategic move to revamp both the macroeconomic and monetary policy in Nigeria by the president was once the consensual position of the elites. Now that they've been granted what they wished and clamoured for, they should stop acting as though their wishes didn't come true. The bourgeois view has now been adopted by the political class; it's glaringly pretentious for the bourgeoisie to act like they didn't know exactly what they ask

Besides, it does no one any good if we continue to perpetuate and reward corruption and fraudulence simply because we want to uphold the status quo of elitism. Subsidy removal is a positive economic move; and no amount of virtuesignalling is sufficient enough to brush stroke it as calamitous.

ABCD: The use of local assets, talents to bring development

By Correspondent Deogratias Mushi

SSET Based Community Development (ABCD) is an approach to sustainable community-driven development with a premise that communities can drive the development process themselves by identifying and mobilizing existing, but often unrecognised assets, thereby responding to challenges and creating local social improvement and economic development.

Beyond the mobilisation of a particular community, it is concerned with how to link micro-assets to the macro-environment. It is this grassroots approach to development that makes ABCD one of the most popular development models.

The Tanzania Gender Networking Programme (TGNP) uses this approach through its Knowledge Centers (KCs) based in various parts of the country to implement sustainable community-driven development

Last week, TGNP organized a five-day training for KCs members from Mbezi, Majohe, Mabibo, Saranga, Kivule, Mabwepande and Manzese in Dar es Salaam Region.

Other participants came from Mbiu, Mwadui, Mwaweje, Kishapu, Kiloleni, Mondo, Mkenyenge, Maganzo and Songwa KCs in Shinyanga Region.

The primary aim was to let the participants share experiences on how women should tap resources available in their own areas for development.

According to TGNP Executive Director Lilian Liundi, the objective was to help participants understand how to link micro-assets to the macro-environment for communities to drive the development process themselves.

Anjelina Mahona is a 34-year-old woman who resides at Mkeyenge Ward in Kishapu District, Shinyanga region. She has been going around her area for over a decade now, sensitizing women to tap available resources around them for their own development.

She did not go beyond primary school but has been an agent of change in her community, educating women on how to be self-reliant through socioeconomic activities so that they can take care of their families.

"In our community, women used not to have the right to own land and other properties that culturally belong men-led families. Through KCs training, my community has started to change after understanding the importance of letting women own properties since they play key role in their children's education and welfare", she ABCD draws out strengths and successes in a community's shared history as its starting point for change. Of all the assets that exist in a particular community, the approach pays particular attention to the assets inherent in social relationships as evident in formal and informal associations and networks.

ABCD's community-driven approach is in keeping with the principles and practice of participatory approach to development where active participation and empowerment (and the prevention of disempowerment) are the basis of practice.

A rural-based woman like Mahona is proud that she has been trained on how to make sanitary pads and she recently started receiving orders from the nearby institutions such as schools, a development that allows her to employ some other women in, thus contributing to their social-economic wellbe-

"I can make 100 sanitary pads per day. I work with organizations like Life Water based in Mwamala Ward which has four schools namely Mwaluka, Igebu, Ibanza and Mwanale. An NGO based Kahama District has also placed an order for the pads I make. My pads can be reused after being washed,"

According to Liundi, there is a need to build on assets that are already found in the community and mobilize individuals, associations and institutions to come together to work on their assets and eventually respond to their needs.

"An extensive period of time should be spent in identifying the assets of individuals, associations and then institutions before they are mobilized to work together to build on the identified assets of all involved," she said.

She added that the identified assets from an individual are matched with people or groups in KCs who have an interest or need in that asset, and the key is to begin to use what is already in the com-

Liundi said that in the past when a person had a certain need, they used to go to their neighbour for assistance but this has since changed due to challenges such as skills hence people go to professionals for assistance.

"The welfare system today works in such a way that professionals have made poor people their clients, robbing them of the support from their neighbours who now think that they are not skilled," she

According to her, the poor begin to see themselves as people with special needs that can only be met by outsiders, but this can be changed through ABCD process.

Such associations are the vehicles through which all community's assets can be identified and then connected to another in ways that multiply their power and effectiveness, she asserted, adding that users of the ABCD approach are deliberate in their intentions to lead by stepping back.

"We provide an opportunity to enhance participants' capacity to organize and demand transformative approaches to governance and decision-making on policies, to ensure that the resources are allocated to promote gender equity, women empowerment, and social transformation," she said.

According to Rehema Mwateba who facilitated the training in Dar es Salaam, it also focused on how to mobilize both women and men in the production of food crops for food security to reduce the burden of unpaid work on women.

"It is undisputed that women are the most affected by the impact of climate change in our country and it is important to empower women farmers with modern agricultural technology. We want our trainees to be agents of this change," she said.

She added that this will shield women from the threats of decreased production in drought seasons and guarantee availability of adequate food and sustainable livelihoods for households which depend on farming.

To urban-based women, there is a need to increase microfinance credit to small-scale women traders who have a bigger contribution to household and national economy.

Mwateba said that since the establishment of KCs over a decade ago, the centres have been at the forefront of grassroots mobilization, organizing transformative feminist movement building at the local level.

It should be recalled that Tanzania implemented its second Five-Year Development Plan 2016/17 to 2020/21 (FYDP II) which encouraged sustained growth based on private sector development with the objective of becoming a middle-income country with a varied and semi-industrialized economy.

This was implemented alongside the Sustainable Development Goal number two which targeted to end hunger, achieve food security and improved nutrition, and also promote sustainable agriculture.

Re-thinking disability inclusion for the SDGs

By Ulrika Modéer and Jose Viera

HIS year marks halfway towards the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), an ambitious agenda which set out to transform our world. We have always known that the goals cannot be realized without the inclusion of persons with disabilities. From poverty to inequality, climate to health the promise to leave no-one behind is the bedrock of the SDG call to action.

Unfortunately, the midway indicators should give us all cause for concern. The UN Secretary-General recently announced that progress on 50 percent is weak and insufficient and we have stalled or gone into reverse on more than 30 percent of the goals.

And what can this lack of SDG progress tell us about disability inclusion?

Worryingly, very little. While the SDGs include persons with disabilities, this does not fully extend into the monitoring. Only seven out of 169 targets specifically address disability inclusion and only 10 of their 231 indicators explicitly require disability data disag-

However even without specific SDG data, the extent of progress must be called into question when we see that, in 2023, the 1.3 billion people worldwide who experience significant disability, still face a range of barriers to inclusion.

While specific actions to progress disability inclusion undoubtedly need reinvigorating, it is also important to remember that we are living in unprecedented, testing times.

The COVID-19 pandemic, the largest cost of living crisis this generation has ever seen, climate change and increasing conflicts are placing pressure on communities all over the world at a ferocity and speed which we have rarely seen before.

And while everyone may be affected by these interconnected crises, they are not affected equally. The most vulnerable always bear the greatest burden and persons with disabilities have been disproportionately affected by the events of recent years.

Yet despite these challenges, across the world, disability inclusion has been gathering greater momentum. Even in the most challenging of crisis settings, such as the war in Ukraine, we have seen that early assessments such as the one UNDP carried out - looking at how to improve the accessibility of information and notifications in crises, and the specific difficulties persons with disabilities face during evacuations have brought together persons with disabilities, civil society and government partners to help bring about

These joint efforts also give recognition to the importance of not only taking into account the needs of persons with disabilities as beneficiaries of aid. but also their engagement as key actors in humanitarian response planning.

An increased understanding of intersectionality awe-inspiring to see the extent to which organizations ternational Disability Alliance.

of persons with disabilities are driving forward this

But it is time for global and country level policy commitments to catch up. At a global level monitoring of the SDGs must include greater involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities, and this should be matched with investment for these groups, to ensure capacity building programmes around the SDGs can

Without this, the disability community and underrepresented groups will continue to struggle to take part in national SDG plans.

The collection of disability-specific SDG data is also a priority. Persons with disabilities are often excluded from participating in data collection processes, leading to an under-representation of their perspectives.

Data collection mechanisms designed by and with persons with disabilities and their respective organizations, including disaggregated data on disability types, age and gender, are vital yet currently missing.

At a national level, we must fast track implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, which sets out to promote, protect and ensure the human rights of persons with disabili-

Significant progress has been made since 2008, when the convention came into force, but more must be done to develop policies and legislative frameworks in close consultation with persons with disabilities and their respective organizations, and to couple this with strong political will and the necessary resources.

UNDP and the International Disability Alliance (IDA) are working together with global partners to advance this work, recognizing that it is a prerequisite to

But much more remains to be done. Because we cannot truly claim progress when in large parts of the world, persons with disabilities are still unable to equally and meaningfully participate in the world around them. When they remain unheard and unseen in programmes designed to meet their needs, and when systemic barriers to their full inclusion and participation in society still exist.

This year offers an important moment for reflection, to take stock of what has been achieved but also - critically - to course correct. Persons with disabilities are some of the most marginalized and excluded in the Righting this wrong is one of the ways that we can get the SDGs and the 2030 Agenda back on track. This is not a task for one group or one country. It will require cooperation across the board, political will and perhaps most importantly - real collaboration with persons with disabilities and their representative organizations - recognizing that they are the ones who stand to benefit or lose the most from the progress being made.

Visit by India's External Affairs minister seen enhancing Indo-Tanzanian relations

By Guardian Correspondent

NDIA'S External Affairs minister. Dr Subrahmanyam Jaishankar (pictured), has recently completed an official visit to Tanzania widely regarded as part of a strategy to bolster relations between the two countries. Here are excerpts from remarks he made in response to questions from The Guardian:

Question: How would you summarise the focus of your visit?

Answer: Tanzania is an important partner for India, as the two countries boast historical relations. We have deep-going links spanning multiple sectors, including education, defence, trade and investment. We have in place various institutional mechanisms for reviewing the relations, one being the Joint Commission Meeting or Joint Permanent Commission Meeting. During this visit, I co-chaired the JCM with Tanzania's Foreign Affairs and East African Cooperation minister, Dr Stergomena Tax. The JCM has for long served as a crucial platform for us to comprehensively evaluate and assess the entirety of our engagements alongside enabling us to plan for multiple areas of cooperation in the future. I am delighted to express my satisfaction with the fruitful discussions we have had which touched on multiple areas of interest and priority domains.

I have had a highly productive and rewarding meeting with President Samia Suluhu Hassan. During our interaction, I expressed my gratitude for her exceptional leadership and unwavering support in enhancing our bilateral relations. Furthermore, I took the opportunity to commend her for the series of landmark reforms implemented under her leadership.

I also visited Zanzibar, where

Zanzibar President Dr Hussein Ali Mwinyi. You would be happy to know that it was while I was there (in Zanzibar) that we signed the memorandum of understanding on the establishment of the first offshore campus of the Madrasbased Indian Institute of Technology (IIT). And, by the way, my visit to Zanzibar coincided with the visit of Indian Naval Ship INS Trishul to Zanzibar, this in and by itself showcasing the expanding defence cooperation between Tanzania and How would you describe the current level of cooperation between India and Tanzania?

As already explained, India boasts historical relations with Tanzania - these dating back several centuries and linked by the agesold Indian Ocean trade routes. Our countries have shared a history of a colonial past and even now we face similar developmental challenges. We are intricately balancing our growth and development aspirations with contemporary challenges like climate change, new and unprecedented health emergencies as well as energy crisis, to name but a few.

Being typically developing countries, we are bound by a raft of issues, challenges, prospects and considerations. We have come to increasingly and gainfully understand and support each other. This is reflected in our current growing engagements. It's not only that our bilateral relations have become stronger but also that we have supported each other at a range of multilateral forums.

India and Tanzania have had wholesome engagement in a variety of sectors. Our trade has crossed the US$6.4 billion mark, an unprecedented achievement. Tanzania is India's fourth largest trade partner in Africa. The bilateral trade is years, Tanzania's exports have increased significantly. You may wish to know that 98 per cent of Tanzania's exports enjoy duty free status in India. Additionally, Tanzania is home to Indian investments in several sectors. Our defence collaboration is, meanwhile, deepening. Development partnership is a strong element of our bilateral relationship. Our support of about US$1 billion for Tanzanian water projects, capacity building and scholarship programmes and other collaborative projects have won resounding appreciation from the Tanzanian people after having had great positive impact in their lives.

Our links are not limited to business-to-business or government-to-government relations but have grown into much broader people-to-people ties. We have a large Indian diaspora in Tanzania who have contributed - and continue to contribute - immensely to nation building in Tanzania. Further, India hosts a number of Tanzanians for various forms of education and training as well as for medical reasons. Tanzanian siblings Kili and Neema Paul are social media sensations in India. This goes on to show the close connection between our peoples.

In what areas of cooperation between Tanzania I had an excellent meeting with relatively balanced and, in recent and India would you appreciate seeing enhancement or strengthening for the benefit of both countries?

I am satisfied with the current momentum and extent of cooperation that we have with Tanzania but I know that there is surely room for more growth. Going forward, we are determined to boost cooperation in sectors like ICT, healthcare, agriculture, education, energy and mining.

India has made remarkable progress in digital governance for its population of 1.4 billion. Our vision of Digital India is to transform our country into a digitally empowered society by ensuring that digital technologies improve the lives of the citizenry; create investment & employment opportunities and enhance digital technological capabilities in the country.

The Digital India movement has helped a lot in the delivery of services directly to the intended beneficiaries in a transparent manner, removing leakages. We have shared our digital technology and helped partner nations to build their own biometric systems as well as digital payment and other networks.

There is a greater potential for partnership and collaboration in this sector, as offered to the Tanzanian delegation during the recent G20 event held in Pune, a sprawling city in the western Indian state of Maha-

Initiatives like Start-up India have ignited a culture of entrepreneurship among the youth in India. We will encourage Indian start-ups to venture into the Tanzanian market as well as support collaboration between Indian and Tanzanian start-ups.

Agriculture sector cooperation will remain an important pillar and I am happy to see the Indian private sector showing interest in investing in Tanzania. Similarly, we are noticing great interest among Indian investors in Tanzania's energy, infrastructure and mining

Is there any bilateral agreement guiding the two countries to cooperate in the various sec-

Our overall development cooperation is a time-tested practice that is supported by several sector specific agreements between India and Tanzania. The Joint Commission brings them all together for an overall stock-taking.

Are you satisfied with your visit? What is the future scope of cooperation between India and Tanzania?

Yes, very much so. This is my second visit to Tanzania and I was looking forward to it given the growth in the engagements between our two countries. As I have already mentioned, Tanzania is an important partner and a maritime neighbour across the Indian Ocean. We are both democracies with young populations and fast growing economies. There are several areas of convergence and opportunities to work together. I am certain that you will be seeing steady growth in our government-to-government, businessto-business and people-to-people relations as we head into the future.

What is the current status of the India-Tanzania Joint Permanent Commission?

This is the 10th round of the JCM. It has proved an effective mechanism in the past and, once again, on this occasion as well. I believe that the roadmap that it produces will be a comprehensive guide for our shared endeavours.

ECOWAS hailed for leadership in eliminating NTDs in Africa

THE Economic Community of West African States (ECO-WAS) has been recognised for gains made by the West Africa region in tackling neglected tropical diseases (NTDs) that affect more than 600 million people in Africa, nearly half of whom are in ECOWAS.

ECOWAS was presented with a Leadership Award by Uniting to Combat Neglected Tropical Diseases during the bloc's Heads of State Meeting. The award honoured 10 of ECOWAS's member states who are among 21 African countries that have successfully eliminated at least one NTD. Also recognised were Ghana and Benin; both countries received a Major Achievement Award for eliminating three NTDs NTDs are a group of 20 preventable and treatable diseases that are endemic in 49 African countries, and which affect over a billion people globally. They cause suffering, disability, disfigurement, and are fatal in many cases. They also inflict significant economic damage on individuals and countries in terms of lost productivity and treatment costs. The African continent accounts for more than a third of the global NTD burden.

Speaking during the awards ceremony, Guinea Bissau's President, Umaro Sissoco Embaló, who is also Chairman of ECOWAS, commended the region for its relentless pursuit of an NTD-free West Africa

President Embaló "Across West Africa, we have witnessed the transformative impact of our combined efforts. Through sustained commitment and innovative strategies, we have made substantial strides in reducing the prevalence of NTDs, alleviating human suffering, and promoting a brighter future for our people."

Reacting to the announcement, the Chair of the African Union Commission, Moussa Faki said: "Our vision for Africa is for healthy and wellnourished citizens, free from preventable diseases, including NTDs. The exceptional achievement by ECOWAS showcases the relentless efforts to accelerate the elimination of NTDs on the Continent. As we celebrate these accomplishments, we must redouble our efforts to promote domestic resource mobilisation, enhance integration and further advance the fight."

Recognition of the achievements of ECOWAS, Ghana, and Benin, follows that accorded to Togo in 2022, when it became the first country globally to eliminate four NTDs and the first African country to be validated as having eliminated sleeping sickness.

The President of the ECO-WAS Commission, Dr Omar Alieu Touray, said: "The progress we have made in eliminating these debilitating diseases is a testament to the dedication and collaboration of our member states and serves as an inspiration to double down on our efforts."

The Director-General of the West African Health Organisation (WAHO), Dr Melchior Athanase J.C. Aïssi said: "The collective determination and coordinated actions of ECOW-AS member states is reflected in a recent health ministers' resolution in Abuja in accelerating the elimination of NTDs and could serve as a model for other regions. The commendable leadership and multisector efforts have contributed to the progress achieved in the region.

Recently, Benin and Mali were validated by the World Health Organization for successfully eliminating trachoma, a highly contagious bacterial infection that is the primary cause of infectious blindness globally.

Ghana holds the distinction of being the first country in sub-Saharan Africa to eliminate trachoma and joins Benin and Togo in having successfully eliminated at least three NTDs each.

Ghana's President Nana Akufo-Addo said: "I am immensely proud of the remarkable progress we have made in combating NTDs in our region. We have shown that together, and with resilience, no challenge is insurmountable. Let us continue to push boundaries, strengthen partnerships, and leave no one behind in our pursuit of an NTD-free West Africa. The Kigali Declaration on NTDs, which Ghana is proud to have endorsed, provides the political framework for countries and partners to come together to deliver our global goals."

On her part, the Representative of the WHO Regional Director for the African Region, said: "The African region has achieved some progress in the elimination of NTDs with twenty countries having eliminated at least one NTD. However, we know that more still needs to be done to improve living conditions and increase access to prevention and treatment of NTDs for our people. With the right investment, we will achieve elimination of all NTDs in our region and the ECOWAS region is showing that this is possible."

"The collaborative efforts of ECOWAS member states have truly set a remarkable example in the fight against NTDs. By prioritizing resilience, innovation, and sustained commitment, we are charting a path towards a healthier and more prosperous Africa," was the reaction of Dr Socé Fall, Director of WHO's Global NTD Programme.

The recognition of ECO-WAS's achievement follows efforts at the continental level to eliminate NTDs. Development of the Continental Framework and Common Africa Position on NTDs, which acts as a strategic guide in the fight against NTDs, has led to calls for increased national funding in order to eliminate these diseases by 2030.

E. African students to benefit from single qualification framework

By Wilson Odhiambo

AST African international students could soon easily study in neighbouring countries after the Intergovernmental Authority on Development (IGAD) proposed a new qualification framework to mitigate the difficulties faced when seeking education across borders.

IGAD has, over the past year, been conducting a series of seminars and workshops aimed at finding a solution to the problems faced by foreigners and refugees looking to continue with their education and employability in foreign lands

During the 3rd IGAD conference held in Nairobi, Kenya, in March last year, it was agreed that its member states needed to develop a harmonised qualification framework that would allow their students to cross borders in search of work and education easily.

The IGAD member states include Kenya, Somalia, Ethiopia, Sudan, Djibouti, Uganda, South Sudan and Eritrea

Countries usually have different education systems and standards, making it mandatory for foreigners to prove their qualifications before joining any institution.

Joining a higher education institution in Kenya demands one to have attained certain set standards from high school, which in this case, is to have a mean grade of at least a C+. Therefore, an international student seeking to join the same institution must show that they achieved an academic qualification from their country equivalent to the Kenyan standard.

To do this, they must go through the Kenya National Qualification Authority (KNQA) and have their high school grades converted to verify whether they meet the standards.

However, given the difference in curriculum and education standards for different countries, this is usually a tedious process for many.

Students have complained of waiting for months (or even years, in some cases) before having their qualifications approved to join learning institutions. This has especially been tough on refugees from Somalia and South Sudan, whose education systems are still volatile, making it difficult for them to get quality education in countries of their choice.

South Sudan, for instance, has seen many of its citizens stream into Kenya in search of refuge and a fresh start to life. And due to their height, many Sudanese teenagers are sought after by basketball coaches in colleges and universities who are willing to offer them sport scholarship opportunities.

IPS spoke to James Mathiang during one of his basketball games to understand his transition process as a foreigner trying to further his ambitions.

Mathiang is a refugee from South Sudan who had been offered a sports scholarship by African Nazarene University (ANU) but is yet to join since he has not cleared the qualification process.

"I came to Kenya in 2021 with my family and currently live in one of the estates in Nairobi. Our country

Sudanese refugee James Mathiang (left) with teammates. He has had difficulties getting his qualifications recognised even though he was offered a scholarship. Photo: Wilson Odhiambo/IPS is still facing civil unrest, and my parents felt it was wise for us to seek refuge in Kenya, which also meant continuing with our lives in a new country," Mathiang told IPS. "I play basketball and have many of my relatives who have been in Kenya for longer, who also play the sport and were able to introduce me to some of the teams they play in."

It was not long before one of the basketball scouts noticed Mathiang's potential and offered to get him a scholarship in return for his talents. Mathiang is, however, yet to benefit from the deal due to the required qualification conversion

process

"It has already been seven months since I was offered the scholarship, but I am yet to understand how the conversion process works. I may have to sit for another qualification exam in Kenya since my papers are not recognised by KNQA," Mathiang told UWN.

According to KNQA, the qualification is a planned combination of learning outcomes with a definite purpose and is intended to provide qualifying learners with applied competence and a basis for further learning.

Joining a university in Kenya, requires one to have completed four years in high school and attained a mean grade of at least a C+.

This standard may differ in a country like Sudan or Uganda, where students must spend at least six years in high school before joining a University. As such, a Kenyan going to Uganda in search of higher education has to meet a standard equivalent to that of Uganda and vice Rollins Oduk, who has been on a basketball scholarship at the Uganda Martyr University, recalls how it took him almost two years to convert his secondary school certificates to meet the qualifications required by the Ugandan system.

"Since Uganda did not have a qualification system like Kenya, I had no choice but to enrol into one of their secondary schools and sit for fresh exams so that I could be accepted by their higher education institutions. In the meantime, I could still play for the University and get some financial benefits as I waited. This is a good move by IGAD, and it will help a lot of foreigners like me," Oduk told UWN.

According to IGAD, only one of its member states, Kenya, has a properly functioning qualification system that enables foreigners to confirm and convert their qualifications quickly.

Dr Alice Kande, managing director, KNQA, explained that having a regional qualification framework would lessen students' obstacles when moving across the member states in search of education.

"KNQA is receiving so many foreign qualifications that are awarded without a clear clarification on whether they are accredited in their countries of origin, their requisite volume of learning, the skills that they impart and their equivalence to local qualifications," Kande told IPS.

"The authority plays an important role in ensuring that authenticity of foreign qualifications is ascertained; and that the country only accepts and recognises foreign qualifications that meet the national standard. By doing this, we hope that students get quality training and education that equips them with the skills necessary to work both locally and internationally and that the country as a whole only accepts and recognises qualifications that meet the national standard and protects the country from fake and substandard qualifications," she added.

According to Zetech University, it is tough for institutions to enrol international students due to the bureaucracy of specific government offices that frustrates the effort of potential students and the recruiting universities. There is a disconnect that makes it necessary for the concerned offices to sit with the universities and discuss a way forward.

"To join Zetech, foreign students are expected to have a visa, a student pass and the KNQA equation to get admission. It is particularly difficult for Somali students because of the fear of terrorism; hence the student pass takes too long to process," said Dr Catherine Njoki, Liaison and Resource Mobilization Director Zetech University. A student's pass can take up to eight months to a year to acquire, making some give up entirely on their education.

"The students are also required to equate their results with the KNQA. This Government body is also very slow in their service delivery, and they decline to support the recruiting institutions with a general guideline of how students can get temporary admission as they await the confirmation. KNQA should become a little flexible with such information and also realise the country needs the foreign exchange as much as the institutions need the students," Njoki told KNQA, however, states that it should only take two to eight weeks for an evaluation process to be concluded.

"According to Kenya National Qualifications Authority, service charter evaluation of qualifications processing time is (14-60) working days from receipt of an application. This is counted from date of receipt of all relevant documents provided by the applicants," Kande explained.

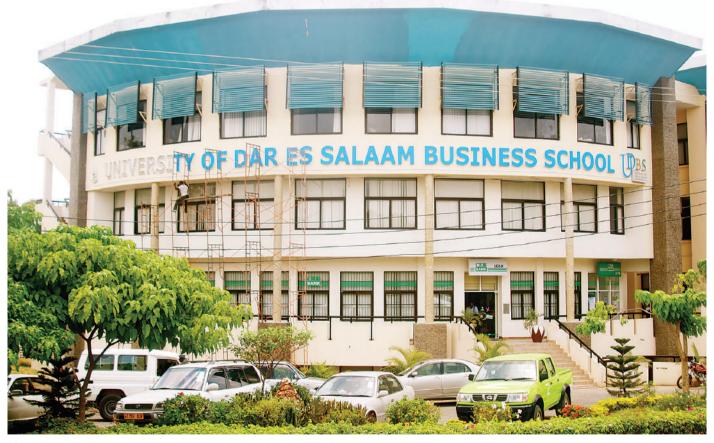

The following are some of the requirements that will be expected of someone trying to have his qualifications converted: (i) certified copy of each qualification certificate to be evaluated, (ii) certified copy of official transcript of each qualification to be evaluated and (iii) Certified copy of certificate and transcript of qualification preceding the one that has been submitted for evaluation.

Others are (iv) certified copy of identity document or birth certificate for children under the age of 18 for citizens or passport for foreigners and (v) translations (if applicable) together with the documents in the original language prepared by a sworn translator.

Njoki added that IGAD should bring all stakeholders involved to help address these issues.

"I would like to continue with my education through this sports scholarship, and if this harmonised system works, there are many foreigners like me who are going to benefit from it," Mathiang concluded.

IGAD has been conducting a series of seminars aimed at finding a solution to the problems faced by foreigners and refugees looking to continue with their education in foreign lands.

Treasury to pocket 127bn/- from Barrick-Twiga joint venture

By Francis Kajubi

THE Treasury is slated to pocket $52million (127.15bn/) for the year ending June 2023 from the joint venture between the government and Barrick Gold Corporation.

Lightness Mauki, director of public investment at the Treasury, said on Monday at a half-year meeting between Barrick and Mara regional government leaders that as of last month the treasury had received a non-tax revenue from this stake worth $36million (88bn/-).

She said the amount has been directly deposited to the treasury account, as she hopes that the remaining amount will soon be debited into government coffer.

"This is the dividend from the government's 16 percent shareholding in Twiga Minerals Corporation Ltd. This money is going to serve for the implementation of various development projects as per the government plans," said Mauki.

Since its establishment, Twiga Minerals Corporation has invested more than $12.5 million in landmark projects identified in collaboration with the community development committees established to push for social services and set alternative sources of income for host communities.

Twiga has also committed $30 million to a Future Forward School Programme.

Briefing the press earlier, Barrick president and chief executive officer Mark Bristow said that the partnership is vested in producing at least 500,000 ounces of gold annually for more than 10 years at the lower half of the industry cost curve.

Bristow asserted that since Barrick's buyout of the minority shareholders, the company has contributed more than $2.8 billion to the country's economy through taxes, levies, dividends, salaries and contracts to local suppliers.

Equally important, he said, the company has fixed the environmental, land claims and human rights issues that destroyed the mine's reputation.

Through Twiga partnership the mining company will build 1,090 classrooms and other facilities across 161 schools nationwide, to accommodate some 49,000 of the estimated 190,000 students who join A-Level studies this month.

Barrick has pledged $40 million to construct a 73 kilometer tarmac road from Kahama district to Kakola district in Shinyanga region.

"Barrick has a policy of prioritizing local employment and at Twiga this has delivered a workforce which is 96 percent Tanzanian, with almost half drawn from the communities around the mines," said Bristow.

According to him, Barrick is committed to expanding its presence in the country.

The company is currently consolidating key prospecting licences with a view to expand its existing reserves and resources as well as to discover new world-class gold deposits. On the other hand, the company has invested 1bn/- in a clean water project to serve four villages in rural Tarime district where it operates through the North Mara mine project.

The investment which is incorporated in the company's corporate social responsibility (CSR) plan has seen 3,700 households with 34,000 people from the villages of Nyabichune, Nyangoto, Matongo and Mjini Kati benefiting from the

The company has been treating almost 300,000 litres of water for the host community's consumption at its mining site which are stored in a reservoir to be supplied to people through taps.

Hermence Christopher, North Mara community relations superintendent said that the project has facilitated easing access to clean water for host communities.

"Barrick has been working to uplift host communities in almost all sectors from education, health, business empowering, and infrastructure to horticulture;

We had realized that host communities had faced difficulties in accessing clean and safe water for domestic consumption. In this case, Barrick reached a conclusion of coming up with this project," said

He further noted that apart from funding the project, Barrick has worked with the Rural Water Supply and Sanitation Agency (RUWASA) in rural Tarime district to make the project a reality.

Doto Lino, Chairman of the Matongo ward water users association said that prior to the project residents of the four villages had used to pay more for clean water supplied by water users through bowsers.

According to him, residents also walked long distances during dry seasons in search of water for household consumption.

"This project has brought a relief in terms of costs of accessing clean water for domestic use. Prior to this project, one has to pay 2,000 to secure five buckets of 20 liters for family consumption. In other words one used to pay 400/- for a 20 liters bucket," said

He asserted that as of now one has to pay only 40/- to fetch a 20 liters bucket of water on a tap supplying water from the reservoir constructed by the mining company. In this case, he said, one has to pay only 200/- to fetch five buckets of water.

"As I speak, about 300 residents have filed requests seeking to be connected with tap water from this project in their homes. Villagers have to pay 10,000 to be connected with a tap from the reservoir;

They will also be liable to pay 2,000/- for 1,000 liters or one unit of water. We are working with RUWASA in implementation of these activities,"

Kenya's fuel taxes beat S.Africa, US on higher VAT

KENYA has joined the league of countries collecting the highest taxes on fuel, calculated as a percentage of the final price, overtaking bigger economies such as the US and South Africa.

Though Tanzania has the cheapest fuel in the region, the ratio of taxes as a percentage of the pump price ties with Kenya at 40 percent.

Kenya charges seven levies and two taxes on fuel and last week doubled Value Added Tax (VAT) on the commodity sel, compared to 14 percent to 16 percent, further increasfor every litre of super petrol, diesel and kerosene.

A litre of super petrol and diesel jumped to Sh195.53 and Sh179.67 respectively in Nairobi in the wake of the imposition of the new VAT rate from the start of this month against the backdrop of public outrage over the heavy taxation of fuels.

President William Ruto defended the decision to double VAT despite it having trigof living given that Kenya's economy heavily relies on Diesel in Kenya will, however, be cheaper at $1.27 per litre compared to $1.361 in Uganda, and $1.282 in Rwanda. Diesel is cheapest in neighbouring Tanzania at $1.099 a litre.

Villages get 6.9bn/- from carbon credit in Arusha

By Guardian Reporter, Arusha

LOCAL communities in 25 villages in Arusha Region collectively earned a total of 6.9bn/- last year from carbon credits, through dryland forests and woodland conservations. involving three climate mitigation and environmental impact projects.

This was said in the latest impact report by Carbon Tanzania, which highlights the significant contribution of nature-based carbon credits in combating climate change and deforestation, while at the same time supporting local communities.

Revenue earned from carbon credit sales supports health insurance funds with outreach clinics, community development projects, salaries for community rangers, and fees for training and education.

Carbon Tanzania contracts with local communities, ensuring that indigenous people become stewards of the forests, benefiting from the carbon finance as well as helping international efforts to protect nature through their effectiveness at protecting their natural

"Carbon Tanzania's impactdriven approach to sustainable forest management and en's empowerment initiatives biodiversity protection not only preserves wildlife-rich forest habitats but also enables local communities, with their valuable traditional knowledge, to recognize the value of their natural assets," the report says.

Prior to project development, the deforestation rate in the projects areas was above the national average.

"At the highest level, carbon finance is about including communities in the global financial system and allowing very remote communities access to the money in that system," says Marc Baker, Co-founder and CEO, Carbon Tanzania.

"Our projects recognize the crucial role of local communities and depend on their active involvement. Through collaborative decision-making, local communities determine the allocation of carbon revenue, supporting initiatives like building schools or healthcare facilities." In alignment with 12 of the UN's 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), the 2022 impact report shows how economic, social, and environmental benefits the local communities have attained by supporting economic growth through the distribution of carbon revenue.

Notably, the report says wom-

are also currently implemented across all projects.

Women serving as Village Game Scouts (VGS) defy gender stereotypes and their salaries not only support their families - but also contribute to small businesses which benefit the entire community, the report says.

Furthermore, improved access to quality education has been achieved through projects such as the Makame Savannah, which allocated 934.5mn/- to education in 2022.

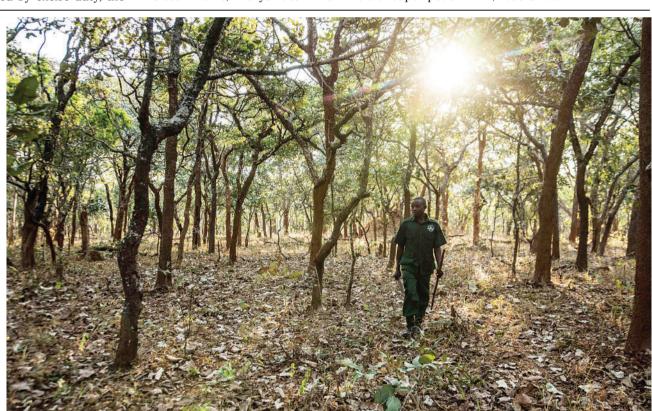

The construction of a girls' dormitory has facilitated the attendance of 70 school-aged girls who would have otherwise faced traditional taboos regarding boarding schools for girl children, according to the report.

"Quality education for all genders without a doubt highly benefits the communities," it says

Addressing deforestation requires supporting locally implemented mechanisms that prevent unregulated land clearance, the report says.

By collaborating with local communities and higher levels of government, Carbon Tanzania says it aims to build political support for protecting natural forests and selecting specific areas for agriculture.

Mariamu Anyawire Mwakilosa, Community Coordinator of the Yaeda-Eyasi Landscape Project says; "Deforestation posed a significant challenge for us.

The financial revenues from the carbon credits we now earn from protecting our forests in the way we always have, mean that we now have the resources to ensure our land is not invaded and our forests stay standing."

"Before the Ntakata Mountains Project, no one in the community was concerned about the environment because they didn't realize its importance, not even when people from neighbouring regions made land invasions and attacks, and caused massive destruction of forests, water catchments, destroyed wildlife habitat and disturbed forest ecosystems," added Frank Kweka - Project Manager Ntakata Mountains Proiect.

Through strategic land-use plans, defined land boundaries, and the dedication of Carbon Champions, the project has effectively prevented deforestation.

Carbon Tanzania say it remains committed to exploring the potential of a global market for biodiversity credits and building partnerships with local communities, government entities, NGOs, and private enterprises.

With national carbon trading regulations in place, Carbon Tanzania is working towards aligning with the Paris Agreement and Tanzania's Nationally Determined Contributions, driving finance to underfunded national parks, reserves, and surrounding communi-

OIL steadied as China signaled further economic aid for its ailing property sector, bolstering the outlook for fuel demand in the world's top crude importer.

West Texas Intermediate futures held near $73 a bar-

China's sluggish economic rebound from the Covid pandemic has posed headwinds for crude prices this year, along with monetary tightening by central banks and resilient crude flows from producers including Russia and Iran.

"From a perspective of risk appetite, the Chinese measures are important but not enough to move the needle, and more initiatives will be needed," said Ole Sloth Hansen, head of commodity strategy at Saxo Bank A/S.

Oil prices have also been supported by OPEC+ heavyweights Saudi Arabia and Russia, who announced supply curbs over the summer in a bid to tighten inventories and prop up the market.

Halotel uses Sabasaba trade fair showcasing products, services

By Guardian Correspondent

HALOTEL Tanzania took center stage at an ongoing Sabasaba exhibition by showcasing its wide range of services and products to the enthusiastic attendees.

The telecom made its presence felt by offering an array of exciting activities and promotions to engage with customers and introduce them to the company's latest offerings.

In line with their commitment to providing top-notch services, the company announced that has decided to revamp its logo to reflect the quality of their offerings.

One of the highlights was the opportunity for customers to register for new Halotel services and products.

The registration process was seamless, allowing visitors to easily become part of the Halotel family and enjoy the benefits of their reliable telecommunication services.

Another notable feature of Halotel's participation was the swapping of 3G customers to faster and more advanced 4G network.

As of 10th July 2023, a total of 626 customers received gifts, according to a statement issued by the company yesterday.

"Customers who took advantage of the service were rewarded with a chance to play the exciting lucky spin wheel game, where they had the opportunity to win a range of attractive gifts," it says.

"As part of our ongoing improvements, we have redecustomers will now be able to enjoy unrestricted access to our upgraded 4G internet services," said Halotel director of business Abdallah Salumu.

He said the lucky spin wheel game offered various prizes, including Halotel branded key holders, cups, caps, vouchers, and the grand prize, a brandnew Samsung Galaxy A14 smartphone.

"This promotion generated immense excitement and drew a significant crowd to the Halotel booth throughout the exhibition period," he noted.

Visitors were thrilled to have the chance to win these fantastic prizes while experiencing the company's superior 4G internet speeds firsthand.

To further enhance the customer experience and create a memorable event, Halotel collaborated with Barnaba Classic, a famous music artist in Tanza-Barnaba Classic performed a live stream on social media, capturing the attention of his vast fan base and engaging with customers at the exhibition.

"This collaboration not only added a vibrant atmosphere to signed our logo to align with our the event but also allowed Haloenhanced range of services. Our tel to connect with a wider audience and showcase its products and services to music enthusiasts across the country," the statement further said.

"During the exhibition, lucky winners of the grand prizes were eagerly awaited as they were presented with their gifts live by Barnaba Classic himself. This added an element of anticipation and excitement, making the Halotel booth a must-visit destination for attendees."

The statement explained that the involvement of a renowned artist like Barnaba Classic helped Halotel create a buzz and left a lasting impression on visitors.

To further entertain and engage the attendees, Halotel organized activities such as MC performances and lively dances on select days.

Additionally, the company had a dedicated team of professional and friendly PG girls who warmly welcomed visitors to the Halotel booth.

Their presence created a welcoming atmosphere and ensured that every guest felt valued and appreciated.

With over 800 visitors including some several government officials and customers were visiting the Halotel booth, the company has successfully raised awareness about its services and products while delighting attendees with exciting promotions and engaging

Halotel's active involvement in the exhibition not only showcased its commitment to providing excellent telecommunication services but also demonstrated its dedication to customer satisfaction, according to the statement. "By continuously upgrading its network, offering attractive promotions, and partnering with influential personalities like Barnaba Classic, Halotel is proving its position as a leading telecommunications company in Tanzania," the statement concludes.

Critical mineral shortages to ease on investment surge, IEA says

LONDON

SHORTAGES of battery metals and other critical minerals are looking less likely to stymie the transition to a low-carbon economy, the International Energy Agency (IEA) said in a new report tracking a surge of investment into the mining

Investment in the industry has jumped 50 percent over the past two years, driven chiefly by increases in lithium projects, and a host of newly announced projects indicates that supply is catching up with an anticipated boom in demand through to the end of the decade, the agency said in the report published Tueswarned that booming demand for critical minerals during the energy transition risked creating huge shortages of critical raw materials like lithium, cobalt, copper and nickel.

Two years ago, the agency

There have been similar warnings from banks, consultancies, trading houses and miners themselves, but the IEA now says that a spending splurge on new mining projects is helping close the longterm gap between supply and demand.

"We look at the situation after raising alarm bells, and we are of the view that governments and companies have responded to this rather challenging situation," Fatih Birol, the head of the IEA, said in an interview. "We all know that mining projects often face delays – there are permitting issues and cost over-runs – but the picture from an investment point of view is rather that all of the announced projects in the pipeline will come online, recent invest-

While it's far from assured ments show capital markets are doing their job in helping to stimulate supply, Birol said.

If they do all make it into production, it would be sufficient to satisfy nearly 75 percent of the supply needed to fulfill the world's net-zero requirements in 2030, he said. That's up from about 50 percent in its 2021 report.

While the report is good news for the climate and carmakers who faced soaring prices for battery metals last year, the IEA also said political efforts to diversify global supplies have so far been ineffec-

In the case of refining and processing some raw materials, supply has become more concentrated geographically. For example, 90 percent of new nickel refining projects tracked by the IEA are located in Indonesia.

The investment in mining hasn't been evenly distributed either, and copper could still face shortages unless spending picks up, he said.

While copper is a much larger market than lithium, nickel and cobalt, its broad applications in the renewable energy and electric-vehicle sectors have prompted several similar warnings in recent months. Even so, Citigroup said the metal is emerging as investors' preferred way to bet on the energy transition, a trend that will bolster fundraising opportunities for copper miners.

"We see there's a growing need for copper coming because demand is growing very strongly," Birol said. "In the medium term, the copper supply-and-demand balance may be rather challenging."

Euro zone bonds hold steady ahead of US inflation data

LONDON

EURO zone government bond yields were little changed on Tuesday, hovering at elevated levels after a sharp rise last week, as investors waited for Wednesday's US inflation data.

The yield on Germany's 10-year bond, the euro zone's benchmark, was last down 2 bps to 2.608 per-

It rose 24 bps last week and hit a four-month high of 2.679 percent on Monday in a sign that investors are increasingly believing central bankers when they say interest rates are going to remain high for some time.

There was little in the way of economic data driving euro zone yields on Tuesday, analysts said. A closely watched investor sentiment survey from Germany is due later in the European morning session.

The key event this week is the release of June's US consumer price inflation (CPI) numbers tomorrow, which is likely to influence the Federal Reserve's interest rate decision this month.

"The CPI tomorrow, probably everyone's waiting for that, that is the key piece for the puzzle this week," said Lyn Graham-Taylor, senior rates strategist at Rabobank.

Traders broadly expect the Fed to raise interest rates by another 25 bps to a range of between 5.25% and 5.5 percent on July 26.

The market thinks the European Central Bank has further to go to quell euro zone inflation. Rates are currently at 3.5 percent in the bloc but pricing in derivatives markets shows traders expect them to rise to a peak of 4 percent or more by early next year.

Expectations for higher interest rates have pushed up bond yields in recent weeks. Yields move inversely

Germany's 2-year yield, which is highly sensitive to interest rate expectations, hit a 15-year high of 3.393 percent last week, rising back above where they stood before yields plunged in response to the banking crisis in mid-March.

The two-year yield was up 1 bp at 3.338 percent on

Meanwhile, Italy's 10-year yield was unchanged at 4.364 percent. Investors see the bond as the benchmark for the euro zone's more indebted countries.

The closely watched gap between Italy and Germany's 10-year yields widened slightly to 174 bps.

Longer-dated yields rose more than those on shorter-dated bonds last week after a long period when the opposite dynamic dominated.

Graham-Taylor said one driver of this could be "a bit of uncertainty premium because people don't know what's going on, so people are demanding a bit more yield on these long dates".

Data on Tuesday showed that British wages rose at the joint highest rate on record in the three months to May, keeping the pressure on the Bank of England.

Improved investment climate spurring FDI inflows, says EPZA

By Guardian Correspondent

THE Export and Processing Zones Authority (EPZA) said the government effort to address investment challenges has witnessed increased investment inflows that are necessary in boosting economic growth.

The EPZA Director General, Charles Itembe made the remarks recently at the 47th Dar es Salaam International Trade Fair (DITF) taking place in Mwalimu Julius Nyerere Grounds along Kilwa Road in Dar es Salaam.

"Investments inflow has been rising during the Six Phase Government under President Samia Suluhu Hassan due to the concerted efforts in creating friendly investors environment," he said.

Statistics from the then Ministry of Investment, Industry and Trade shows that from July last year to March this year the manufacturing sector in the country recorded 104 projects which is 43.33 per cent increase.

During the period, the ministry recorded five projects worth US$15.5 million invested in Export Processing Zones (EPZ) that make goods for exports.

The projects are expected to generate export revenues worth US$12.46 million and create 1,247 jobs.

The projects have covered various sectors namely agriculture, forestry and industrial products. To date, the ministry's statistics show that the projects have already invested US$11.99 million and generated sales revenue valued US$17.15 million and created

Some of the markets for the products from these projects are namely USA, Asia, Canada, South Africa, Democratic Republic of Congo, South Sudan, China, Ukraine, Vietnam, Zambia, Egypt, India, Dubai and Pakistan.

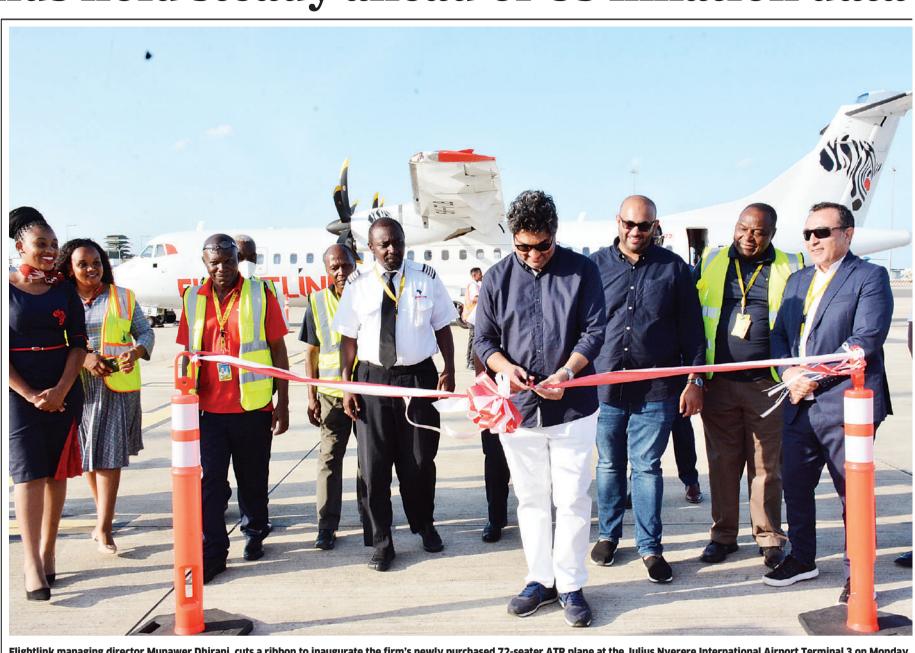

"To improve further investment climate, the government is continuing to address challenges related to policy and laws which are impeding smooth investment flow into the country," he added.

For example, the government apart from providing tax and non-tax incentives as well as removed some fees which have been a stumbling block to investors in Itembe said recently the EPZA introduced the Business Facilitation Portal system that became operational this month to help investors from anywhere in the world access various information on how to register and invest in the Tanzania.

"We encourage investors to visits EPZA booth at the 47th DITF to get information on various things related to investments in the country," he added.

On his part, the James Maziku, the EPZA Director of Investment Promotion and Facilitation said the investments flow has been registered during the 6th Phase Government due to efforts put to create friendly investment climate.

Türkiye agrees to advance Sweden's NATO accession

TÜRKIYE agreed to advance Sweden's accession to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) on Monday, a day before the alliance's summit in the Lithuanian capital, NATO Secretary-General Jens Stoltenberg announced.

Stoltenberg said at a press conference following a three-party meeting with Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan and Swedish Prime Minister Ulf Kristersson that Türkiye has agreed to forward Sweden's accession protocol to the parliament as soon as possible and ensure its ratification.

The NATO accession process requires the approval of all member states. Sweden and Finland applied to join the alliance last year, but faced objections from exports to Türkiye, all steps set out in Türkiye, which argued that the two the Trilateral Memorandum agreed in countries harbor members of the outlawed Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) and the Gulen movement.

Türkiye eventually lifted its objection to Finland's NATO accession earlier this year after Helsinki took "concrete steps" against such organizations. In April, Finland became NATO's 31st member state. However, Ankara continued to block Sweden's NATO bid.

The NATO chief said that since the 2022 NATO summit, Sweden and Türkive have worked closely together to address Türkiye's legitimate security concerns.

2022," he said.

The two countries agreed to continue their cooperation under the Trilateral Permanent Ioint Mechanism within the framework of the Trilateral Memorandum, and also under "a new bilateral Security Compact that will meet annually at ministerial level and create working groups as appropriate," he added.

Earlier on Monday, before leaving for Vilnius, Erdogan said that his country would support Sweden's joining NATO if the European Union (EU) revived membership talks with Ankara, an unexpected move that some media claimed would "rock the alliance's unity."

Sweden's NATO membership has been a key

The Swedish Peace and Arbitration Society told Dagens Nyheter (DN) newspaper last week that the country would be safer not belonging to a military alliance.

CHINESE President Xi Jinping on Monday met with visiting Russian Federation Council Speaker Valentina Matviyenko in Beijing.

Xi noted that with joint efforts of both sides, China-Russia relations have maintained a sound and steady development momentum, with steady progress in cooperation in various fields. The social foundations and popular support for the long-term friendship between the two countries have become more solid.

"During my state visit to Russia in March this year, President Putin and I reached new and important consensus on deepening bilateral comprehensive strategic coordination and practical cooperation in various fields," Xi said, noting that the development of China-Russia relations is a strategic choice that the two countries have made based on the fundamental interests of their respective countries and

China will continue to work with Russia to develop a comprehensive strategic partnership of coordination for a new era, featuring mutual assistance, in-depth integration, innovation and win-win outcomes for all, so as to boost the development and revitalization of the two countries and promote the construction of a prosperous, stable, fair and just world, Xi said.

Noting that legislative cooperation is an important part of China-Russia relations, Xi expressed the hope that the two sides will work together to implement the important consensus reached by the two heads of state, promote and guarantee the sustained and sound development of bilateral cooperation in various fields from the legislative level, strengthen exchanges of experience in legislation and state governance, and push cooperation between the legislative bodies of the two countries to a new level.

He called on the two sides to strengthen communication and coordination within multilateral mechanisms such as the Shanghai Cooperation Organization and BRICS, guide the reform of global governance in the right direction, and safeguard the common interests of emerging markets and developing countries.

Matviyenko said the Russia-China comprehensive strategic partnership of coordination conforms to the interests of the two countries and the will of the two peoples, and has reached its highest level in history and continues to develop steadily. President Xi's successful state visit to Russia in March has injected strong impetus into the development of Russia-China relations.

The Russian Federation Council supports deepening Russia-China cooperation and is willing to strengthen exchanges with China's National People's Congress to provide a legal guarantee for the implementation of the consensus of the two heads of state, Matviyenko said.

Modi's France visit to likely boost economic cooperation and shape EU-India strategic ties -report

NEW DELHI

PRIME Minister Narendra Modi's visit to France is likely to boost economic cooperation between India and France and shape broader strategic ties between European Union and India, Media India Group reported, adding that his visit to France holds special significance as the two nations are celebrating 25 years of their strategic partnership.

PM Modi (pictured) will visit France to attend the Bastille Day Parade as the Guest of Honour at the invitation of French President Emmanuel Macron. He will be the second Indian PM after Manmohan Singh in 2009 to be the Guest of Honour at Bastille Day Parade, the report said.

PM Modi's visit presents an opportunity for the two nations to move into the next phase in the India-France strategic partnership and set new ambitious goals for cultural, scientific, academic, economic cooperation and wide range of interests, Sunil Prasad, Secretary General of Brussels based Europe India Chamber of Commerce wrote in the Media India Group report. So far, India has signed more than 35 strategic partnerships agreement with countries. However, India signed the first-ever strategic partnership with France in January 1998.

In the past 25 years, through numerous bilateral meetings, a strong institutional mechanism has been established to strengthen cooperation between India and France in the space, defence, civil nuclear, renewables, cyberspace, digital technology, counter terrorism and the blue economy sectors, the report noted.

These initiatives not only cover the two nations, however, some are also multilat-

Change Summit in 2015 jointly launched International Solar Alliance to promote solar energy in 121 tropical countries all over the world. India and France enjoy synergy in the defence sector.

France is set to play a significant role in the growth of India's civil aviation industry. In June, Air India and IndiGo announced purchase agreements to acquire 250 and 500 aircrafts respectively from Airbus during the Paris Air show. The agreement marks a landmark milestone in ties between India and France.

France is a nation of the Indo-Pacific and PM Modi's visit will help strengthen the collaboration between two nations in the Indo-Pacific where France has overseas territories and an exclusive economic zone.

The two nations share a vision of a free, open, and rules-based order, based on commitment to international law, respect for sovereignty and territorial India and France at the Paris Climate integrity, freedom of navigation and a region free from coercion, tensions, and conflicts, according to Media India Group report.

France hosts the fourth-largest Indian community in Europe after the United Kingdom, Italy, and Germany, and is making efforts to attract students and professionals from India.

A bilateral agreement on migration and mobility cooperation is already in place between two nations which aims to facilitate circular migration on the basis of mobility and return of skills to the home country.

PM Modi's visit will leverage India as an active strategic partner on many dimensions, which includes gathering investors, focusing on clean energy and global peace, Media India Group reported, adding that his visit will strengthen the spirit of cooperation with India's European partners and mould India's image as a reliable and confidant collaborative partner.

Russia-GCC cooperation not geared against anyone – Lavrov

MOSCOW

COOPERATION between Russia and member countries of the Cooperation Council for the Arab States of the Gulf, also known as the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC), does not seek to hurt anyone, Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov said on

"Today's meeting confirmed that we always lay bare our positions honestly and no one of us is seeking to cooperate against anyone else," he said after the sixth ministerial meeting of the Russia-GCC strategic dialogue in Moscow.

He stressed that neither Russia nor the Gulf countries had ever tried to interfere with each other's relations with third countries. In his words, this is what distinguishes them "from a range of other relations, which, regrettably, are not equal."

The top Russian diplomat described Russia's relations with Gulf countries as "friendly, cooperative and based on mutual trust, due account of each other's interests, and the desire to form consensus approaches to any issues under discussion."

Lavrov met with representatives from the Gulf Cooperation Council nations on Monday. The meeting adopted a joint statement and a joint plan of action for 2023-2028.

Set up in 1981, the GCC includes six countries, namely Bahrain, Qatar, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Oman, and Saudi Arabia. Its key goals are political coordination and economic integration between the member nations, as well as cooperation to ensure security in the Gulf. Zelensky to attend NATO summit NEW YORK

UKRAINIAN President Vladimir Zelensky was expected to arrive in Vilnius to take part in a NATO summit

today, Bloomberg reported on Monday, citing its sources. Earlier on Monday, NATO Secretary General Jens Stoltenberg confirmed Zelensky's participation in the Vilnius summit. He said that the Ukrainian president will attend the first meeting of the Ukraine-NATO Council.

He said earlier that Ukraine will not be invited to join NATO during the summit in Vilnius but a signal will be sent to it that the alliance's doors remain open to it. He also said that NATO will adopt a long-term program of military assistance to Ukraine that would be implemented regardless of how the conflict with Russia was progressing.

NATO's Bucharest summit in April 2008 vielded a political declaration that Ukraine would eventually become a NATO member. However, the alliance did not provide a Membership Action Plan (MAP), the first step in a prospective member country's legal procedure for joining the or-

UN report calls for redoubling global efforts to achieve sustainable development goals

UNITED NATIONS

THE world risks big misses across the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) unless actions to accelerate implementation are taken, said a UN report released on Monday.

Failure to redouble global efforts to achieve the SDGs may fuel greater political instability, upend economies and lead to irreversible damage to the environment, according to "The Sustainable Development Goals

Report 2023: Special Edition." The SDGs were unanimously adopted by world leaders in September 2015 to serve as the blueprint for global development efforts in the years leading up to 2030.

The 17 goals aim to end poverty, fight inequalities and tackle climate change. Using the latest available data and estimates, the new report provided a comprehensive midpoint assessment of the progress of the SDGs.

The combined impacts of the climate crisis, the conflict in Ukraine, a gloomy global economic outlook and lingering effects of the COVID-19 pandemic have revealed systemic weaknesses and hindered progress towards the SDGs, the report

According to the report, of the approximately 140 targets that can be evaluated, half of them show moderate or severe deviations from the desired trajectory, and more than 30 percent of these targets have experienced no progress or, even worse, regression below the 2015 base-

It said that the impacts from the COVID-19 pandemic stalled three decades of steady progress in reducing extreme poverty, with the number of people living in extreme poverty increasing for the first time in a generation.

If present trends persist, by 2030, 575 million people will remain trapped in extreme poverty and an estimated 84 million children and young people will still be out of school, the report

It further warned that while lack of progress is universal, it is the world's poorest and most vulnerable who are experiencing the worst effects of these unprecedented global challenges. Meanwhile, the report pointed to progress in some areas since 2015 which illustrates the potential for further advances.

Among the progress highlighted, the share of global population with access to electricity has increased from 87 percent in 2015 to 91 percent in 2021, with close to 800 million additional people being connected.

The report also illustrated that the number of people using the Internet has grown by 65 percent since 2015, reaching 5.3 billion people of the world's population in 2022. Such important development gains demonstrate that a breakthrough to a better future for all is possible through the combination of collective action and strong political will, and the effective use of available technologies, resources and knowledge, said the report.

"We are at a moment of truth and reckoning. But together, we can make this a moment of hope," UN Secretary-General Antonio Guterres wrote in the forward of the report. "I urge all member states to make 2023 the moment when we jump-start progress on the SDGs, to create a more peaceful and prosperous future for all," he added.

If present trends persist, by 2030, 575 million people will remain trapped in extreme poverty and an estimated 84 million children and young people

Rutte's goodbye to politics means end of an era in Netherlands

THE HAGUE

MARK Rutte's announcement of departure from Dutch politics came as an absolute surprise on Monday, marking the start of a new era for the country that had the same prime minister since

On Friday, Rutte's fourth government fell, and on Monday Rutte was supposed to give a brief explanation prior to a debate at the House of Representatives in The Hague.

It was expected to be a tough debate for Rutte, because opposition parties Green Left (Groen-Links), Labor Party (PvdA) and Party for Freedom (PVV) had already announced their support for a motion of no-confidence against Rutte.

If the majority supports the motion of no-confidence, Rutte would have to resign immediately and not, as he intended, be able to continue as a caretaker prime minister until the swearing-in of a new government after the elections, probably to be held in November.

Rutte started his speech by explaining the fall of the government. But in the end, he suddenly said that he also wanted to share something personal and announced his departure from politics, saying he will no longer be available as leader of his People's Party for Freedom and Democracy (VVD) in the next elections.

"There has been speculation in recent days about what would motivate me," Rutte said. "The only answer is the Netherlands. My position is completely subordinate to that. On Sunday I decided that I will not be available as a leader for the VVD in the upcoming elections.'

Accustomed to Rutte surviving every crisis, members of opposition parties and his coalition partners were much surprised by the announced departure. For some, the decision came too late, while others expressed their appreciation.

"I have a lot of respect for the step he is taking now, which restores confidence that he can zen Movement (BBB), called it lead this outgoing government during the period until the elections," said GroenLinks leader sen said that the departure was Rutte's departure marks the end of an era indeed. He stepped own after leading four governments since 2010 as prime min-

He was the man who survived every political storm and always managed to keep things together in the Netherlands. However, in recent years Rutte's survival skills became less convincing.

During the COVID-19 crisis in 2020, his popularity reached an absolute peak, but criticism increased later about his sometimes apparent indifference and poor memories of certain situa-

His third government crashed on Jan. 15, 2021, as a result of the so-called child benefits tax scandal, in which innocent parents were wrongly accused of fraud.

When Rutte's fourth cabinet was formed, his own position was seriously under pressure for the first time in early 2021. He survived again, refused to stop and started his fourth reign.

On Friday, his last coalition government, with the VVD, the Christian Democratic Appeal (CDA), Democrats 66 (D66) and Christian Union (CU) fell over a dispute on the migration policy.

Afterward, Rutte showed his usual optimism. When asked whether he wanted to be VVD party leader, Rutte responded: "If you ask me now, I would naturally say yes.

Because I have the energy and the ideas for it."Three days later, he nevertheless announced his departure from politics. No one foresaw it and the exact consequences are still uncertain. Rutte's own future and that of his successor at the VVD are unclear.

What is clear is that the announced departure of the longest-serving prime minister in Dutch history will change the political landscape of the Netherlands a lot.

Biden on Europe tour meets with UK's Rishi Sunak, Charles King III ahead of NATO meeting

LONDON

UNITED States President Joe Biden began his trip to Europe on Monday with a visit to London where he met with British Prime Minister Rishi Sunak and King Charles-III

The US President described the relationship between the two nations as "rock solid." The meeting between Biden and Sunak comes ahead of a key NATO meeting in Vilnius, Lithuania's capital.

Biden, who is on a three-nation visit, made his first stop at the UK before heading later in the day for a NATO leaders summit in Lithuania.

In the UK, the President first sat down with PM Sunak at his No. 10 Downing Street residence.

At the meeting, Biden said, "We met in San Diego, Belfast, Hiroshima, Washington, here. And couldn't be meeting with a closer friend and a greater ally. And we got a lot to talk about, and I -- I think we're doing well. I think we're moving along in a way that's positive, but our relationship is rock solid between the United States, Great Britain. And I look forward to our discussions," according to the statement released by the White House.

PM Sunak welcomed Biden and said, "Very privileged and fortunate to have you here.'

Recalling the previous meeting at the White House in June when UK and US signed the Atlantic Declaration -- the first-of-its-kind economic our conversations, which partnership, Sunak said, we were having just a like, in the White House, ing countries in tackling where we signed the Atlantic Declaration -- the first-of-its-kind economic partnership, which I know we'll be talking about today: how do we strengthen our cooperation, joint economic security to the benefit of our citizens."

The UK PM further stated that after this they will head to NATO in Vilnius, and will do everything they can to strengthen Euro-Atlantic security. Sunak hailed the UK and the US as "two of the firmest allies" in Nato, according to the statement.

Later on, Biden met King Charles III at Windsor Castle with 23 leading philanthropists and financiers to help catalyze finance to support emergthe climate crisis.

After this, the gathering followed the Climate Finance Mobilization Forum, which was convened by the UK Energy Security and Net Zero Secretary Grant Shapps and US Special Presidential Envoy for Climate John Kerry, and inspired by the work of the King.

gathering "Today's builds on longstanding UK-US efforts to turbocharge the net zero, resilient transition already underway in developing and emerging economies on the road to COP28," the statement read.

In the three-nation visit, Biden will travel on to Vilnius, Lithuania, on Monday night and hold talks with NATO leaders there on Tuesday and Wednes-

On the agenda of the NATO summit, alliance leaders will discuss the conflict in Ukraine.

Biden's last stop will be in Helsinki for talks with the leaders of the newest NATO member, Finland, and to attend a summit of US and Nordic leaders.

UN warns of 'full-scale civil war' in Sudan

NEW YORK

THE United Nations has warned that Sudan could be on the verge of an all-out war after a weekend airstrike killed dozens in a residential area in the Sudanese city of Omdurman, CNN reported.

At least 22 people were killed and many injured in a shelling attack early on Saturday, the country's health ministry said, as months of infighting between Sudan's rival military forces continue to rage on across the country. United Nations Secretary-General Antonio Guterres said the weekend bombing was an indication that Sudan was now on "the brink of a fullscale civil war."

"The Secretary-General remains deeply concerned that the ongoing war between the armed forces has pushed Sudan to the brink of a fullscale civil war, potentially destabilizing the entire region," said a statement from Guterres' office condemning the airstrike, CNN reported.

"He is appalled by reports of largescale violence and casualties across Darfur," the statement further said while expressing concerns about renewed clashes in some of Sudan's worst-hit states that have seen large displacement of civilians.

"There is an utter disregard for humanitarian and human rights law that is dangerous and disturbing," the statement added.

The UN Secretary-General urged the Sudanese Armed Forces (SAF) and the paramilitary Rapid Support Forces (RSF), the two warring factions fighting for control in Sudan to end hostilities.

The RSF blamed the SAF for Saturday's airstrike, describing it as "the most severe aircraft bombing ... on innocent citizens."

Fierce fighting erupted between the rival groups in Sudan in April, leaving hundreds dead and thousands injured.

Data from the United Nations International Organization for Migration, (IOM) said nearly 2.8 million people have fled Sudan, many without passports, for neighbouring countries such as Egypt, Ethiopia and Libya.

China's eastern city builds better environment for software industry

AT 10:00 am, a new demand popped up on freight dispatching platform Yunmanman, asking to send a batch of auto parts to Horgos, northwest China's Xinjiang Uygur autonomous region from Yuhuatai district in Nanjing, capital of east China's Jiangsu province.

In less than two minutes, the order was taken, and relevant information was simultaneously sent to the truck driver.

"The scheduling system for car-hailing services works to find available drivers near passengers, but that for freight services must rely on big data and cloud computing to match the demand and supply sides in a more targeted manner. It acts intelligently in a wider geographical range," said Wang Dong, chief technological officer of Yunmanman.

Wang took the Jiangsu-Xinjiang order as an example. After the platform received the consignor's demand, it checked the length, load capacity, compartment type and other information of trucks available at that time to see whether they were capable of shipping auto parts. It then made matching and recommendations based on truck drivers' experiences and the consignor's preference.

Thanks to the application of big data, cloud computing, artificial intelligence and other technologies, it takes just minutes to match a truck driver with a consignor on Yunmanman.

Ex-Aussie PM criticises NATO chief as 'fool', 'American agent'

FORMER Australian Prime Minister Paul Keating has criticized Secretary-General of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) Jens Stoltenberg for being a "supreme fool" and "American agent," as the military alliance is seeking expansion into Asia.

In a statement released by the public policy journal platform Pearls and Irritations on Monday, Keating (pictured) pointed out that NATO's continued existence after and at the end of the Cold War has already denied peaceful unity to the broader Europe, and the Europeans have been fighting each other for the better part of 300 years, including giving two World Wars in the last century.

"Exporting that malicious poison to Asia would be akin to Asia welcoming the plague upon itself. With all of Asia's recent development amid its long and latent poverty, that promise would be compromised by having anything to do with the militarism of Europe -- and militarism egged on by the United States," said Keating.

He underlined that of all the people on the international stage, the supreme fool among them is Stoltenberg, who by instinct and by policy is simply an accident on its way to happen. "Stoltenberg conducts himself as an American agent more than he performs as a leader and spokesperson for European security.

He believes that French President Emmanuel Macron is right to warn NATO away from any expansion into Asia.

"NATO is a military organization, not a civil one, and an organization focused on Europe and the Atlantic," Keating stressed.

Israel's Knesset approves first reading of judicial reform bill

JERUSALEM

ISRAEL'S parliament gave preliminary approval to a bill that limits some Supreme Court power, part of a rebooted judicial overhaul by Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu that has set off a deep political crisis. The drive to change the justice system by Netanyahu's ruling coalition of nationalist and religious parties has sparked unprecedented protests, stirred concern for Israel's democratic health among its Western allies and bruised the economy.

Commanding 64 of the Knesset's 120 seats, Netanyahu's coalition won the first of three required votes for the new bill to be written into law, with protests expected to intensify.

The new bill seeks a curb on the Supreme Court's power to void decisions made by the government, ministers and elected officials by ruling them unreasonable. It now returns to committee for discussion and could be altered before being brought for the final votes.

Critics argue that this judicial oversight helps prevent corruption and abuses of power. Proponents say the change will facilitate effective governance by curbing court intervention. "It is not the end of democracy, it strengthens democracy," Netanyahu said in a video statement released at sundown as the Knesset debated the bill. "Even after the amendment court independence and civil rights in Israel will not be harmed in any way. The court will continue to oversee the legality of government action and appointments," Netanyahu said. His statement did little to calm opponents.

National Athletics Championships set for next month

By Correspondent Joseph Mchekadona

ATHLETICS Tanzania (AT) has said the National Athletics Championships will be held next month, calling upon regions to conduct trials in preparation for the showdown.

One of AT information officers, Tullo Chambo, said the championships have been scheduled for August 8-9 at a venue set to be announced later.

He said AT has written all regional athletics associations to conduct trials to select athletes set to compete in the National Athletics Championships.

The information officer disclosed that regions that will fail to conduct the trials will not be allowed to compete in the showdown.

"This year's National Athletics Championships will be held next month but I cannot mention the venue (for the showdown) as we are still looking for it," he pointed out.

"This is so because the Benjamin Mkapa Stadium (located in Dar es Salaam) is under renovation but one of the conditions for competing in the championships is that all athletes must be selected through the regional trials, failure of which we will not allow them to compete," Chambo said.

The official also said each regional quota of athletes to compete in the National Athletics Championships will depend on the number of regions that will conduct the trials.

The Arusha Regional Athletics Association (ARAA) is one of the first regions to conduct the trials, having conducted them at Sheikh Amri Abeid Stadium on Saturday.

Anthony Mwingereza, ARAA Chairman, said the trials were very successful and his regional technical panel has identified the best athletes set to represent it in the National Athletics Championships.

However, Mwingereza stopped short of mentioning the athletes that have been identified to represent the region in the National Athletics Championships.

More than 200 athletes battled it out in the trials and were in all categories as the trials moreover aimed to see to it the regional athletics association garners a database for the best athletes in each category.

Ministries eye sports talents identification programme

By Correspondent Renatha Msungu, Dodoma

THE Ministry of Defense and National Service is expected to have a meeting with the Ministry of Culture, Arts, and Sports to set strategies for the identification of sports talents that will be sent to the National Service (JKT) for promotion and development.

Minister for Defense and National Service, Innocent Bashungwa, revealed at the climax of the 60th anniversary of JKT which took place at the Jamhuri Stadium in Dodoma last weekend.

Bashungwa said the two ministries are doing so to implement President Samia Suluhu Hassan's order to improve infrastructure and ensure they identify sports talents and develop them.

"We have planned to meet the Ministry of Culture, Arts, and Sports to set strategies for identification of sports talents and send them to JKT to develop them," Bashungwa disclosed.

He further explained that the institution has sports they showcased at the teams for various disciplines including soccer, athletics, boxing, netball, and other sports, so they have to convene the meeting and come up with strategies for the identification of sports talents.

Bashungwa moreover pointed out his ministry will see to it that newly promoted Premier League clubs, JKT Tanzania and Mashujaa FC, owned by the ministry, perform well in the domestic top flight.

The minister said the teams will continue training to prepare for the Premier League, which is billed to be highly competitive, given the showdown's other clubs are roping in good players.

He said the ministry is keen on seeing to it that its clubs are doing well in the various sports competitions they will participate in because they boast lots of talented players.

The minister congratulated JKT for the good preparations the institution made for the celebrations, including inviting artists that performed in the climax. Bashungwa further congratulated the JKT music band that, in collaboration with other artists, entertained people that turned up for the celebrations.

Chief of the Defense Forces, Jacob Mkunda, said JKT youths deserve praise due to the various entertainments event's climax.

Head of JKT, Rajabu Mabele, said that they will continue to identify sports talents in the institution and promote and develop them so that they can scale great heights internationally.

He congratulated JKT Tanzania and Mashujaa FC that have won promotion to the 2023/24 Premier League while stressing that the teams should seek to perform well in the top flight, which is extremely competitive considering the participating teams are making adequate preparations for it.

TLGU salutes Lake Energies golf tournament

By Guardian Correspondent

TANZANIA Ladies Golf Union (TLGU) president, Queen Siraki, says this season's Lake Energies golf tournament held at Dar es Salaam Gymkhana Club (DGC)'s course has motivated participating golf players.

Speaking after the conclusion of the tournament, which involved amateurs, professional golfers, and children, Queen said Lake Energies' sponsorship for the showdown has enhanced competitiveness among the players.

The TLGU leader noted: "This tournament has brought about intense competition, and we hope that Lake Energies will continue to sponsor us in future events."

"We have witnessed our coaches here at the DGC imparting valuable lessons to many young players, in short, this tournament has been very successful," Queen stated.

The CEO of Lake Energies, Abdirahman Ahmed, stated that the company will continue supporting the sport and is considering sponsoring the upcoming Corporate tournament scheduled for next month.

"We thank golfers that participated in this tournament, we will continue to support sports because we believe that sports foster unity and (sponsorship) is a way of supporting the government's efforts in promoting sports in the country," Ahmed stated.

Frank Mwinuka emerged as the overall winner for the professional golfers' category, having returned 71 gross score and was awarded a cash prize of 1m/-.

He was followed by Salum Dilunga that scored 73 gross to rake in 664,000/-, the third place went to Rodrick John that returned with a 74 gross score to walk away with 420,000/-.

Apart from the cash prizes, the winners were presented with gas cylinders from the sponsoring company.

Fukushima-born Endo ready to run free for Japan at World Cup

JUN Endo wasn't allowed to play football outside after the 2011 Fukushima nuclear disaster because of radiation fears, so she honed her dribbling skills in a cramped indoor hall instead.

Japan's Women's World Cup win that year inspired her to keep going and now the forward is carrying her country's hopes into this month's tournament in Australia and New Zealand.

"I couldn't play football because of the effects of the disaster, but just when I was thinking of quitting, Japan won the World Cup," the 23-year-old told AFP. "I watched that and I strongly felt that I wanted to be standing in that position one day

Endo grew up about 100 kilometres (60 miles) from Fukushima's Daiichi nuclear plant and was 10 years old when the deadly tsunami overwhelmed its cooling systems, triggering a meltdown.

About 165,000 people fled their homes in the area, either voluntarily or under evacuation orders, in the worst nuclear catastrophe since

Endo's family lived outside the evacuation zone and stayed put, but radiation regulations at her school meant outdoor play was strictly limited for months after the disaster.

Endo had to share the same small indoor hall with the other kids but she says it had "a good impact" on her control of a football.

"I liked dribbling before then but I began to like it even more during that time," she said. "My technique developed a lot and in terms of what came out of it, it was really good."

Endo says it was difficult to deal with the loss of freedom and she thought about giving up football.

Rare visits to other parts of Japan to play games brought relief but also pain -- she and her team-mates faced discrimination from opposing players who treated them like they were radioactive.

"People would say nasty things to us when we were away on football tours," she said. "Then there were people who didn't want to eat or buy things that were grown in Fukushima and had the name Fukushima on them.

- 'Turning point' -A moment of respite came when Japan upset the odds to win the Women's World Cup in Germany that summer, beating the United States in the final to become national heroes.

Endo recalls getting up in the middle of the night to watch the match with her parents and three siblings. describing it as "a turning point" in her life.

"I had felt the fun going out of football, so to see players doing what I wanted to do - winning the World Cup -- it had a really positive impact on me," she said. "It gave me strength."

Endo now plays her club football for Angel City FC in the United States, having left Japan's domestic league at the end of 2021.

She has become a key figure for her country, after appearing in three of Japan's four games at the 2019 World Cup as the squad's youngest player.

Japan have fallen behind the world's leading sides since winning the World Cup and did not progress past the last 16 in France four years

They have been drawn in Group C alongside Spain, Zambia and Costa Rica for this year's tournament.

- Deep connection -

Endo concedes that it will be tough to reclaim the title but she is hoping to inspire a new generation in the same way that she drew hope from the 2011 team.

"There's not much difference from 2011 -- if we win then women's football will get more attention," she said. "More kids will want to become football players. It's important to win the title."

Japan's World Cup crown was credited with lifting the nation's spirits and the team's connection to the Fukushima area was a deep one.

They often used the Japan Football Association's J-Village training centre there and two of the players even worked at the nuclear plant before the meltdown.

Endo's roots are also tangled up with the disaster but she says she has no intention of running away

"I have nothing but bad memories from the disaster, but it's precisely because it happened that I kept playing," she said. "I try to take it as a positive."

David de Gea, Sir Alex Ferguson's last player, ends 88 years of Manchester United history

By Richard Jolly

Alex Ferguson aged Manchester United for 26 years and 1,500 games, but he only attended 1,497 of them. He missed three: one for his son Mark's wedding, one for his sister-in-law's funeral, and a League Cup tie against Scunthorpe in 2010 when he went on a scouting

SPORTS

The sense then was that he was watching United's Champions League opponents Valencia; instead the teenage goalkeeper in the opposition side, Atletico Madrid, was the focus of his attention.

A dozen vears since he was signed, David de Gea's departure removes the last survivor of the Ferguson era: for the first time since the relegation season of 1973-74, United in 2023-24 will not feature anyone who has made or will make an appearance for the great Scot.

For the first time since 1934-35, there will be none who have played or will play for Ferguson or Sir Matt Busby. Erik ten Hag calls upon Ferguson's counsel but there are ways in which he makes a break with the past, as Harry Maguire and Cristiano Ronaldo can testify.

But De Gea was always intended to be part of Ferguson's legacy: bought when the manager was approaching his 70th birthday, signed with his successors in mind.

Ferguson could be selfish and selfless and De Gea reflected the latter: United got 545 appearances from the Spaniard, the seventh most in their history and second only to Wayne Rooney among those Ferguson bought, and 190 clean sheets, 10 more than even Peter Schmeichel.

And yet his is a legacy that leads itself to different conclusions. De Gea's dozen seasons brought a lone league title: the previous 13 produced eight, with four Champions League final appearances and two victories on the biggest De Gea's last decade comprised of United's wilderness years; in the worst of them, 2021-22, one of their most eloquent critics was the goalkeeper himself, when his own excellence gave him freedom to express his frustration.

But his last game provided a sadly fitting end: De Gea was beaten inside 13 seconds in the FA Cup final, then horribly culpable for Ilkay Gundogan's ultimately decisive second goal. His final year felt a series of indignities: United's Europa League exit to Sevilla owed much to a De Gea shocker, capped by an embarrassing error.

His last few years at Old Trafford were pockmarked by two problems: an increasing number of mistakes - far more forgivable in his good years - and his limitations in distribution; many of his best saves were with his feet, but he struggled to use them to find team-

Perhaps August's 4-0 defeat to Brentford was the beginning of the end in that respect; it was evident he was an imperfect fit for Ten Hag's style of play. It underlined the way that De Gea seemed old before his time, an oldfashioned goalkeeper in a fast-changing

He is only two years older than Alisson, three older than Ederson, less than five the senior of his probable successor Andre Onana, but seemingly plucked from another generation, one where a goalkeeper's job did not extend beyond stopping shots. The hashtag at his peak was "DaveSaves". The issue was that Dave did not kick as well.

De Gea was the future once; at 32, he has become the past. He almost joined Real Madrid in 2015, but for a faulty fax machine, but there is no such scramble for his services now. Even before his contract talks with United ended, it became likelier he would not be first choice.

Staying would have always involved a sizeable pay cut; in part because his previous deal was so lucrative. He was famously the world's best-paid goalkeeper; Ole Gunnar Solskjaer used to lazily parrot the line he was the world's best long after evidence suggested oth-

But at his peak, he was surely in the top five. He had days when he seemed unbeatable. His 14 saves against Arsenal in 2017 came in an extraordinary display of defiance. United branded him a "legend" in the announcement that he would go.

Perhaps he both was and wasn't: De Gea was sometimes a beacon of excellence in mediocre teams, especially in the years immediately after Ferguson's retirement. He was named United's player of the year a joint record four times, but that often reflected a lack of competition.

Schmeichel and Edwin van der Sar never won the award but they were Ferguson's two greatest goalkeeping signings. Each chose his exit and each played his last game in a Champions League final, Schmeichel lifting the trophy in 1999.

De Gea's departure has more common denominators with that of the only other goalkeeper to play 500 games for United: Alex Stepney ended up being dropped by Dave Sexton, his fifth manager. He, too, had had his greatest days in his mid-twenties.

There was a point when it seemed like De Gea would be a fixture for years to come, perhaps ending up second only to Ryan Giggs in United's all-time appearance list. But he started to look a man out of time, even before the interest in Onana suggested he would be a man out of the team.

But outstanding as De Gea was in the mid-2010s, as the last link to Ferguson is severed, it serves as a reminder that the last decade has scarcely gone to

Australia, New Zealand revive 'football's Ashes'

AUSTRALIA and New Zealand will play this year for the "Soccer Ashes", sporting officials said Tuesday, a long-forgotten trophy recently rediscovered almost 70 years after it was lost.

The ornate wooden trophy houses a silver razor case carried during the treacherous Gallipoli landing of World War I, and has been dubbed the "greatest domestic treasure" in Australian football.

Missing since a fixture in 1954, the trophy was rediscovered during a clean-out of a suburban Sydney garage earlier this year.

Reminiscent of the celebrated Ashes cricket urn, it contains the ashes of cigars smoked by the Australian and New Zealand captains after the rivals met in 1923.

It will be put on the line for the first time in 69 years when the Australian Socceroos square off against the New Zealand All Whites at London's Wembley Stadium in October.

"This is a truly historic trophy and it will be brilliant to see it played for this year, and in future years, for the first time since the 1950s," New Zealand Football boss

Andrew Pragnell said.

Football Australia chief executive James Johnson said the trophy was a "wonderful piece of sporting history" that highlighted the deep Anzac military connection between the countries.

"When discussing the significance of the trophy and the story behind it, returning it to its rightful place as the prize the Socceroos and All Whites play for was an easy decision."

The wooden trophy, or casket, was built from a mix of Australian maple wood and New Zealand honeysuckle, while the silver razor case was carried during the Gallipoli landing in 1915 by Private William Fisher -- a football administrator.

"This is quite possibly the greatest domestic treasure there is in the game," football historian Trevor Thompson said earlier this year.

"It's packed with so much imagery about the unity of the two countries, and the razor case that had been to Gallipoli referenced the recent experience of fighting shoulder to shoulder during the First World War."

SPAIN should be among the favourites for the Women's World Cup but without several key players because of a dispute they are taking the hard path.

La Roja will still be a threat in Australia and New Zealand this month, but they are undoubtedly weaker for the absences of stars protesting against the Spanish football federation (RFEF) and coach Jorge Vilda.

Patri Guijarro, who struck twice for Barcelona as they won the Champions League, and club team-mates Mapi Leon and Sandra Panos are big misses, even as two-time Ballon d'Or winner Alexia Putellas returns after injury.

Three players who were part of a 15-strong protesting group have been selected - Aitana Bonmati, Mariona Caldentey and Ona Batlle, all at Barcelona too. They stepped down from their position, ostensibly satisfied that sufficient improvements were being made in the areas the players demanded. Discontent between players on the one side, and the RFEF and Vilda on the other, had been brewing for some Issues they were concerned about included the atmosphere around the camp, Vilda being too strict, the team's lack of success under the coach since his reign started in 2015, and disputes over travel arrangements and staff numbers.

In September 2022 the situation exploded - 15 of the squad emailed the RFEF to say they did not want to be considered for selection citing their "emotional state".

"This is a farce, on the world stage," said Vilda at the time.

"It's hurting women's football."

- 'Practically resolved' -The RFEF backed the coach and he omitted the protesting players for friendlies against Sweden and the

Spain's Aitana Bonmati (L) is one of three Barcelona players who have returned to the national team after protesting. Agencies drew and won respectively.

Victory over world champions the United States strengthened Vilda's position as lesser lights and younger players showed their quality.

Two further friendly wins, including a 7-0 trouncing of Argentina, cemented Spain's conviction they had made the right decision to back the coach.

Spain have lost just one game in 11 matches since the protest began, recording nine victories.

Vilda named a provisional squad for mati, Caldentey and Batlle returning. The other 12 players either stayed firm in their stance or were not selected despite making themselves available again. The coach maintained his loyalty to many of the players he had turned to in the interim.

the tournament on June 30.

- 'We are not rebels' -

The RFEF has improved the players' travel arrangements, extra fitness staff and physios are available, and the players are less tightly monitored during call-ups. However, some did not think the RFEF went far enough.

"It makes me sad as I deserve (to go) and I contributed to getting the team there," said Mapi Leon in May, reiterating why she was continuing her protest.

"It's not a decision that you take lightly and it's not easy. My decision is clear. Mapi Leon has a way of living and she has values to stick to.

"I can't go back, there has to be changes." Spanish reports suggested Barcelona's Putellas acted as a mediator between the returning players and the RFEF, and although she is not the team's captain, she is their footballing leader. Putellas did not like the tag of "rebels" some gave the 15 boycotting players.

"We are not rebels," she said in March. "It's exhausting having to constantly call for improvements to perform bet-

Fountain Gate Schools eye early preps for 2023 FEASSSA Games

By Correspondent Joseph Mchekadona

DODOMA's Fountain Gate Schools' management has stated the schools will intensify preparations for this year's edition of the Federation of East Africa Secondary Schools Sports Associations (FEASSSA) Games slated for next month in Huye, Rwanda.

Fountain Gate Schools will be represented by boys and girls football teams. The school's Principal, Joseph Mjingo, noted in an interview they will start early preparations for the games, seeking to bring the trophy home.

"Fountain Gate boys and girls football teams will soon start preparations for this year's FE-ASSA Games, we could not start early as our players, all of whom are students, were on holiday but now they are back, we aim to emerge champions of this year's edition and, to achieve that, we need to start early preparations," he said.

Fountain Gate Schools' girls team won the girls' category of the maiden Confederation of African Football (CAF) Schools Championships which took place at King Zwelithini Stadium in Durban, South Africa.

The 2023 FEASSSA Games will involve schools from Burundi, DR Congo, Kenya, Uganda, Mainland Tanzania, South Sudan, Zanzibar, and the host nation Rwanda.

The participating outfits will battle it out in various sporting disciplines namely football, swimming, athletics, hockey, netball, rugby, volleyball, basketball, table tennis, badminton, and lawn tennis.

TOC urges athletes to prepare well for 2024 Olympic Games

By Correspondent Joseph Mchekadona

THE Tanzania Olympic Committee (TOC) has called upon all sports associations in the country that will produce athletes for the 2024 Summer Olympics, slated to be held in Paris, to start preparations for the Games.

Filbert Bayi, TOC Secretary-General, made the call when the country celebrated the International Olympic Day at Benjamin Mkapa Stadium in Dar es Salaam last weekend.

Bayi said only through early preparations the country's athletes can bring home medals.

"We still have a chance to win medals in the coming Paris 2024 Olympics, we still have more time to prepare for the Games and the good thing is that there are many qualifying events that our athletes can make use of and qualify for the Games," he said.

This year's Olympic Day celebration's theme was 'Let's Move' and Bayi said the first Olympic Day was held on June 23, 1948, with nine National Olympic Committees (NOCs) hosting events on the anniversary of the International Olympic Committee's (IOC) creation in 1894.

This year's theme aims to inspire people around the world to make time for daily physical petivities

The worldwide celebration of the Olympic spirit sees millions embrace the core Olympic values of excellence, friendship, and respect through the Olympic Day.

At least 70 NOCs are integrating the promotion of future Olympic Games into their local celebrations including, of course, the Paris 2024 Olympic Games.

Senegal will be promoting the Dakar 2026 Youth Olympic Games, held in 2022 due to the global pandemic.

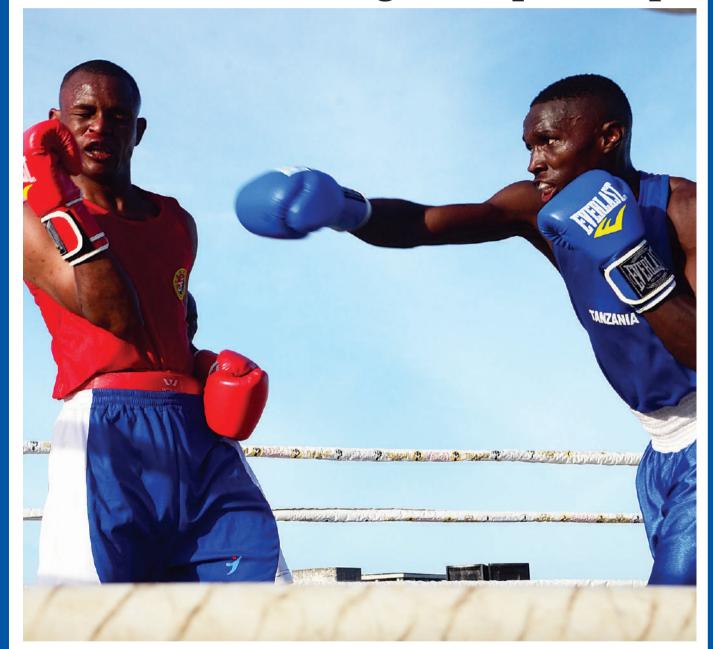

Meanwhile, Australia is already looking ahead to the Brisbane 2032 Olympic Games with a host of 'Have A Go' activities featuring Olympic sports hosted by Olympians.

BOXING Federation of Tanzania (BFT) has disclosed that six boxers will represent the country in the coming International Boxing Association (AIBA) African Elite Boxing Championships slated for the end of this month in Yaoundé, Cameratan

Makore Mashaga, BFT secretarygeneral, disclosed in an interview the championships have been slated for July 26-August 6 and Tanzania will be represented by four male boxers and two female boxers.

However, he could not mention the pugilists, saying the BFT is working on some logistics which include approval from National Sports Council (NSC) before the names are out.

The official noted: "Our initial plan was to send 12 boxers to Yaoundé for the games but, due to financial challenges we are facing, we have agreed to be represented by six boxers." "The boxers will be accompanied by two coaches, for now, it is too early to announce their names but, if everything goes as planned, they will depart on July 25," he said. Makore said the boxers are currently attending training at the National Indoor Stadium in Dar es Salaam.

In this year's edition of the African Boxing Championships, AIBA has doubled the prize money for the boxers, with gold medalists set to rake in $20,000 each, each silver medalist will be presented with $10,000, and $5,000 has been set aside for the bronze medalists.

Meanwhile, Mashaga disclosed that AIBA will, at the end of this month, start offering grants to BFT and other national boxing federations.

This is the first time that AIBA is presenting grants to national boxing federations.

According to the BFT official, each national federation can access a maximum of $50,000 annually but such an amount is only released after the federation's proposal has convinced AIBA leadership.

"This is good news, we can now have our development plans achieved, before the availability of these grants it was very difficult to realize our developmental plans but now we are assured that we can realize many of them," he said.

Banda files complaints to FIFA against Chippa United

By Correspondent Nassir Nchimbi

TANZANIAN defender Abdi Banda has opened a case against his club, Chippa United of South Africa, after the outfit terminated the contract with the player without mutual agreement.

Banda, who was formerly on the books of the other South African club Baroka FC, joined Chippa United last year.

The central defender had first arrived in South Africa after signing with Bakgaga, and he later moved on to Highlands Park.

The footballer got into a dispute with the club after garnering a call-up to his country's senior national team 'Taifa Stars' in May this year.

Chippa United did not seek to launch a round table talk to ask him to reduce his salary from June 1 while heading into the new season which he refused.

Banda said his refusal to reduce the salary is what led his employers to terminate the contract and the defender decided to head to FIFA for legal justice.

"I have not been able to agree with the terms because we have not sat down to discuss moving forward, I have every right to know why and not involve myself in the round table talks, I have decided to file a case with FIFA to get my rights," he said.

Banda further added that he still has a one-year contract left with the club and, as the case proceedings are underway, he will return to South Africa to find a team to keep himself fit before decisions are aired out.

In the FIFA letter issued regarding the saga, Chippa United has been asked to submit their defense regarding the case on July 18 while the judgment is expected to be officially issued on September 18 this year.

If Banda wins the case managed by his lawyer, Lyrique de Plessis, an English citizen, then Chippa United will have to pay him compensation of 4.5 million rands, which is equivalent to 600m/-.

Last season Chippa United survived relegation on the final day having finished 14th in the DStv Premiership log with 30 points after participating in 30 games.
